Large Carmel Valley subdivisions await action

By MICHAEL GARDNER

AS THE legal challenge to certification of the proposed Carmel Valley Master Plan nears a showdown, 10 large subdivision projects are ready to get off the drawing board and before the subdivision evaluation committee.

Alexander Henson, special counsel for the city of Carmel, is expected to argue in court Nov. 29 that the draft master plan and its accompanying environmental impact report should not be certifed.

Henson will present his case to Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver, who in 1980 declared a moratorium on discretionary building permits in Carmel Valley until the county prepared an EIR and revised the master plan.

Silver must lift his moratorium before any of the new developments without existing lots of record can apply to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors for permission to build.

There are 10 such projects already submitted to the county, according to planning staffer Lynn Mounday.

Supervisors met Tuesday, Nov. 20, to adopt modifications in the master plan and EIR that apparently are designed to soften some of the complaints the city has lodged.

Because of the early holiday deadline, results of that session were unavailble by press deadline.

Henson plans to argue that the county has not adopted adequate "findings" to support the mitigation measures included in the EIR, and that many mitigation measures designed to protect the environment have been deleted from the final report.

Henson laughed when he heard about attempts by the county to modify the master plan even before Silver makes a decision on whether the documents should be certified and the moratorium lifted.

"It's immediately suspect because they're doing this solely in response to this lawsuit," Henson told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook. "It's kind of an admission that what they did earlier is wrong."

Henson did say that modifications to the master plan "may avoid some of the problems it's got. I can't really say without seeing what they're proposing to do."

ONCE SILVER certifies the master plan, the citizen subdivision evaluation committee can get to the task at hand.

The committee will review projects and give rankings to the developments based on how well the projects suit the environmental requirements included in the proposed master plan.

Rankings will be advisory and it will be up

Breach of confidence?

Dear Editor:

I call your attention to a statement appearing on page 5 of your paper, The Carmel Pine Cone, on Nov. 1, 1984. The statement reads, in pertinent part as follows:

"One board member, not one of us, breached the confidentiality required by law..."

Said statement is false, untrue, defamatory, malicious, and grossly libelous.

I also direct your attention to two other defamatory statements appearing in your paper. On Sept. 13, 1984, Mr. Miskimon said, in his column: "Mrs. Condren has alleged the meeting took place and that Yates and Fenton have been 'plotting' to force Rand's resignation." The world "plotting" was quoted in the original. I have never at any time said that Mr. Yates and Mr. Fenton were "plotting."

In the Oct. 18, 1984 issue of your paper, in the Letters to the Editor, you printed a letter which stated: "There is a member of the school board who has admittedly repeatedly violated her oath of office..." That statement is false and untrue in every respect, and, I believe, defamatory.

I do not believe that you can, with impunity, print such defamatory statements in letters, advertisements, or as editorial opinion in reckless disregard of the truth, especially when the truth is readily ascertainable as it is in this case.

Patricia Condren
Member, Carmel Unified School Board

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Mrs. Condren herself admitted a breach of confidentiality on her part, and that statement is included as a part of the minutes of the Aug. 20, 1984 meeting of the Board of Education of the Carmel Unified School District, officially approved by trustees Sept. 6, 1984. Here is what Mrs. Condren said: "Last week I shared some concerns with community members. Those concerns were a breach of confidence and I now wish to apologize to the board and to Mr. Rand for having done so.")

FOCUS says 'thanks'

Dear Editor:

As the recently elected president of the Friends of Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS), I would like to extend our deep appreciation to the large group of supporters who helped us celebrate our fifth birthday recently at the Forest Theatre in Carmel. Many of you have expressed a strong desire to continue celebrating our birthdays, so we will begin plans soon for our sixth birthday next October.

I believe it appropriate to reaffirm why FOCUS was formed and briefly outline our organization's structure and objectives. FOCUS is an independent, non-profit, tax-exempt, non-political foundation which was formed in 1979 to obtain funds to help maintain the high quality of the educational programs in all Carmel public schools. Our board meets monthly and consists of members representing various segments of the community.

The single purpose of FOCUS is to raise money for use in the Carmel public schools. Teachers' requests are forwarded through their building principals and the superintendent. Our grants committee recommends to the FOCUS board which requests should be funded after researching each request.

In the past five years FOCUS monies have purchased such items as maps, supplemental textbooks, art supplies, shop equipment and generous support for computer education and music programs. We have also helped fund athletic programs and needed science equipment.

The Carmel Unified School District is going through difficult, transitional times right now. Now more than ever, the students in our classrooms need our help and support. The FOCUS board takes only one strong position in the Carmel community — total support for our students in each classroom in our school district. To that end, we will redouble our efforts on their behalf.

On behalf of the FOCUS board I would like to thank our supporters and donors — not only those who have contributed money, but also those who have contributed their time and talents to "our cause." We appreciate everyone's concern and assure them that their donations will be spent for the programs for which they have been designated.

Ken White
President, FOCUS

Another Youth Center?

Dear Editor:

The Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook has been publishing a lot about a Carmel Youth Center these past weeks in which I have been trying to recognize as the same one for which I've worked these many years. Is there another Carmel Youth Center?

I've searched through all the word symbols in your stories for the Carmel Youth Center of my knowing and experience. I can't seem to find it.

Ah! A thought just came to me! Perhaps the real Carmel Youth Center is hidden within these stories. I'll go back to them and lift each word. I will search very carefully.

No. How disappointing. And I was ever so thorough. I lifted each word. Turned it over, peered beneath it, checked each letter. Nothing. Only the blank empty space of the paper peered back at me.

I've put each word symbol back very carefully within its story. There must be another Carmel Youth Center!

'Ugly metal boxes'

Dear Editor:

Several months ago I was sorry to see a newspaper vending machine in front of the Village Corner restaurant. I worried that its arrival would be an entry for another newspaper to follow suit. It seems that my fears were well-founded because there are now two of them side by side.

How long a lineup will there be before city officials do something to prevent these ugly metal boxes from spreading?

Carmelites, be aware of this influx of sorcerer's apprentices' "brooms" before this situation gets out of hand.

'Thanks for help'

Dear Editor:

Thank you so much for your help in publicizing the Monterey County Symphony Guild's 1984 B-Sharp Follies.

Your generous support in helping to sustain our remarkable symphony is greatly appreciated, and we should like you to know that 20,000 dollars was realized from this project.

Work with trustees

Dear Editor:

A careful examination of the record, in a complete context, of CUSD Trustees Fenton, Bromfield and Yates will show that they have been dedicated and energetic workers on behalf of the district.

Together with Trustees Clayton and Condren, they have a solid record of accomplishment in supporting and establishing improvements in the educational plans and programs for the benefit of all segments of the district. Under these circumstances recall is counter-productive.

We suggest to the critics of Trustees Fenton, Bromfield and Yates that working with them to achieve goals and solve problems would be a far better alternative to recall.

Board policies are wrong

Dear Editor:

Carmel has consistently ranked among the top 5 to 10 percentile scholastically among the school districts of California. Much of the credit for this record can be claimed by the teachers who are attracted to and remain in this community in spite of a pay scale that is among the lowest in the state.

Since Prop. 13 and the decision of the state that rich districts must help finance the poor districts, teacher salaries have not kept up with the cost of living. This year three members of the school board — Fenton, Yates and Bromfield, acting as a majority — have decided to use what little money was available to institute new programs and to offer the teachers a net real increase of less than .5 percent. The new programs have resulted in less time for teaching basics and more "busy work" for the teachers.

As a result of these policies, teacher morale is at a dangerous low and some of them, especially the good ones, are considering other options.

These board members persist in defending their policies and promise to continue along the same lines. There is no doubt that they are sincerely trying to do the best they can in a difficult situation, but I believe that their policies are wrong.

The ultimate decision is with the public. The recall election will give the public a clear choice to what direction it wants its schools to go, continued excellence or the cheapest possible teachers.

Learning to be grateful

GRATITUDE is not one of the most highly prized values in American society. Those who participate in the upwardly mobile middle class usually have their eyes focused on the next promotion, the new car, the lavish summer vacation.

Those lower on the socio-economic ladder often witness the images of plenty parade before them on the television screen or in newspaper and magazine advertisements and churn with frustration or try to figure some way to get onto the road to riches.

Rarely does one hear gratitude — an attitude of thankfulness for what is, instead of what might be — expressed. Gratitude is a trait which needs to be cultivated, human beings the acquisitive and restless creatures they are. At least, I know I wasn't born with an abundance of it.

There are some very compelling and personal reasons why each person can and should have gratitude, and no doubt they vary with individuals. To say that one should have gratitude — the way one might say that people should obey the Ten Commandments — sounds pompous and self-righteous.

All I know on the subject is that the effort to cultivate gratitude forces me to look at the world in a different, and better, way. It's one of the keys to peace of mind, for me, when I can practice it.

I can be grateful that my 12-year-old daughter is healthy, does very well in school, is blessed with loving parents and many friends, and has a generally positive outlook on life. This, despite the death of her older sister about a year ago.

I can be grateful that today I have the opportunity to exercise my talents, to learn something, and to interact with my fellow man in a constructive fashion. This despite the fact I have never done anything perfectly or accomplished anything to my own standards in my lifetime.

I can be grateful for life — which is a gift to be shared with others, over which I have no power as to either its beginning or termination. This despite the many times when I've felt life was unfair and not worth living.

I can be grateful for freedom — the freedom to move about in society, to vote, to express my opinions. This despite the fact I often take those freedoms for granted, or simply am not conscious of them.

I can be grateful that each day I awake to discover there has been no nuclear holocaust, there is another opportunity for world peace. This despite the unknown megatons of death-dealing missiles poised for Armageddon.

What can you be grateful for?

'A nightmarish concept'

Dear Editor:

I certainly hope that you will use your very substantial influence to ridicule those two exalted bodies — the Carmel Planning Commission and the Carmel City Council — over their nightmarish concept of building the library annex on the middle of Lincoln, an important thoroughfare.

With all the congestion and lack of parking in the lower Ocean Avenue area, such a plan is incomprehensible, particularly when there are more sensible alternatives.

These two august groups have come up with quite a few decisions in the recent past that fall something short of the "genius" level.

Among these was the Piccadilly "circus" debacle. This must be the only $400,000 flower pot in the world and gives the taxpayers great satisfaction.

Another is the parking ticket trap on the plaza side of Mission. Another is the permissiveness of truck double parking so close to a crosswalk that, to pass, your car has to enter the crosswalk.

We are only 12-year property owners of Pebble Beach who use the lower area of Ocean Avenue for banking and shopping. Since recall of individuals who make incompetent decisions is the current vogue, I'm sorry that I am not in position to participate in such action if this stupid proposal is carried to fruition.

Rand adds fuel to recall movement

By MICHAEL GARDNER

FORMER CARMEL Unified School District Supt. William Rand has broken his self-imposed silence on his departure and in doing so appears to have added some firepower to a recall campaign directed at school board President Robert Fenton, and Trustees James Yates and Susan Bromfield.

In a brief telephone interview with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook Nov. 16, Rand claimed that Fenton asked him to quit during a private July 18 meeting attended only by himself, Fenton and Yates.

Rand said Fenton brought up the subject of his possible resignation by saying the superintendent did not have the support of a majority of the board — Fenton, Yates and Mrs. Bromfield.

"When he said that, I asked him (meaning Fenton) 'When do you want me to resign?' He said 'Right now'," Rand charged. "That's a quote. I'll never forget it. That's what happened."

Rand had publicly stated several times that he would resign if it became apparent he did not have the support of the board.

Until last week there was just speculation in the community over whether Fenton and Yates had secretly met to force Rand to quit.

Although previously unconfirmed, the alleged meeting to force Rand's resignation has been the backbone of the recall drive targeted at Fenton, Yates and Bromfield.

Fenton, Yates and Bromfield formed the three-member board majority that accepted Rand's resignation Oct. 8. Trustees Doyle Clayton and Patricia Condren, who voted against accepting Rand's resignation, are not targets of the recall campaign.

Asked why he decided to break his silence, Rand said: "The record needed to be set straight because of Bob's statements I had read in the paper that continually said he did not ask for my resignation."

"I just felt I had to clear the air," Rand said.

Rand said he "probably" would not have spoken out if the three trustees had not discussed the issue in so much depth with the press.

And, Rand also is perturbed over what he calls "petty" charges against him levied by Mrs. Bromfield, who had released a lengthy statement detailing why she lost faith in Rand's abilities to do the job.

"They're questioning my competency. I've had a good record and I'll stand on it," he said.

FORMER CARMEL Unified School District Supt. William Rand claims that during a secret July 18 meeting he was told by board President Robert Fenton to resign. Rand's Oct. 8 resignation and speculation that he was forced to quit has fueled a recall campaign against Fenton and Trustees James Yates and Susan Bromfield. (Michael Gardner photo.)

FENTON, YATES and Mrs. Bromfield continually have maintained that it was Rand's decision to leave the district.

They say if Rand had wanted to he could have stayed on and required the board to buy out the last two years on his three-year contract for more than $100,000.

And Fenton, contacted after Rand's statements were made public, still insisted it was the former superintendent's choice to quit.

Fenton gave the following recollection of the meeting:

"I called Bill (Rand) in because I felt that it was my job to inform him that I had reason to believe he did not have the confidence of the board.

"He asked me what he should do. I said 'You should do what you said you would do'," Fenton said in reference to Rand's statements that he would quit if the board lost faith in his leadership.

"I didn't tell him to resign. I told him to do what he had publicly said he would," Fenton said.

"He's no deity. He works for the board," Fenton said. "He was asked to do what he wanted to do and it was his idea all along."

And Fenton pointed out that there never was any official action taken until Rand's resignation acceptance Oct. 8.

Asked why he did not speak earlier, Fenton said: "I felt it was detrimental to Bill Rand and deserved confidence. It was his choice to bring it out first. (It was) to protect his future and reputation as much as possible."

Mrs. Bromfield, who was not present at the July 18 meeting, also stood her ground.

Informed of Rand's remarks, she said: "That's not my understanding at all. That's out of context, I'd say."

Mrs. Bromfield pointed out that even before she was elected in November, Rand had said he would leave if the board did not support him.

"In June, Bill told us that if he didn't have the support of the board he wanted to know about it," she said.

Mrs. Bromfield used the high school renovation project as an example of why she was upset with Rand.

"I got phone calls day and night from parents about the buildings being left open with generators and electrical equipment around unwatched and nobody around in charge," she said.

"I stated my dissatisfaction to Bob over the phone and that's proper procedure," Mrs. Bromfield said. "It was no secret I felt the district was not properly managed."

MRS. BROMFIELD added that trustees Clayton and Mrs. Condren conducted their own personal meeting with Rand after an Aug. 6 evaluation of the superintendent.

"They were in Bill's office for a good part of the day. If anybody wants to cry secret meeting, that probably was," she said in reference to community charges of the private Fenton-Yates-Rand July 18 session.

Fenton sent a memo to board members explaining what happened that day. However, Mrs. Condren and Clayton have not told the other three trustees about what happened at their meeting, Mrs. Bromfield charges.

Yates was out of town and unavailable for comment before press time.

The recall committee, which issues committee-approved press releases and does not allow individual members of the group to talk to the media, released a statement in response to a request from this newspaper.

"Mr. Rand's statement confirms a major ground for recall — that Mr. Fenton and Mr. Yates, acting as individuals, undertook an important action without approval of the board and without the knowledge of two board members (Clayton and Mrs. Condren).

"We deplore attempts to mislead the public about this meeting and we are pleased that Mr. Rand has set the record straight," the brief statement concluded.

In a related issue, teachers and principals in the district have protested recent statements by Mrs. Bromfield and one parent

'The record needed to be set straight because of Bob's statements that continually said he did not ask for my resignation. I just felt I had to clear the air.'

that claim some parents are fearful to speak out against the recall because they believe teachers may seek revenge through the children.

It is no secret that many teachers — angered by a 1 percent salary increase offer — support the recall and some are actively taking the recall petitions door-to-door.

But high school Principal Marsha Kading-Kelly and middle school Principal Frank Lynch are so perturbed at the allegations that they sent protest letters to the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

"I would like to assure all of you that the staff at Carmel Middle School is highly professional and would not in any way take retribution on any student at our school for a particular stance his or her parent might have in regard to the recall," Lynch wrote in a letter to Fenton.

"Our students are our pride and joy. We deal with them in a very nurturing manner. A statement such as the one that appeared in

Clayton issues statement in support of Rand

By MICHAEL GARDNER

CARMEL UNIFIED School District Trustee Doyle Clayton has released a lengthy statement in support of former Supt. William Rand to "just get the facts out."

Clayton has prepared an 11-page defense of Rand in response to an equally lengthy statement from Trustee Susan Bromfield, who raised questions about Rand's alacrity and efficency in handling a variety of important issues.

Mrs. Bromfield's statements were printed in the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook last month after Rand resigned Oct. 8.

Mrs. Bromfield, board President Robert Fenton and Trustee James Yates are now targets of a recall campaign. The cornerstone of the complaints against the three board members is a charge that they tried to force Rand to quit. Rand resigned Oct. 8. (See related story, this issue.)

Clayton's comments do not address the question of whether Rand was forced to quit or voluntarily resigned. Clayton and Trustee Pat Condren are not subjects of the recall campaign.

"During the past few weeks I have received numerous phone calls and questions about the accuracy of the statements in the press as they relate to the Carmel school board controversy," Clayton wrote.

"I have compiled...facts and offer a few of my own opinions so that the public can make an accurate assessment of the current issues.

"The statements I am responding to are the printed statements of Mrs. Bromfield exactly as they appeared in the Oct. 25, 1984 issue of the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

DISPOSAL of surplus school sites, or rather the lack of such action, has brought criticism to former Carmel Unified School District Supt. William Rand. Littles to renew bid to rebuild property

By NANCY HILLS

THE LITTLE family, owner of the Carmel Sands Motel and Simpson's Restaurant, plans to renew its request to the Carmel City Council for permission to rebuilt the entire San Carlos and Fifth Street complex while retaining the non-conforming use permit, according to Matthew Little, family spokesman.

Little said the family does not want to expand either the motel or the restaurant but to demolish the existing buildings and rebuild them to 1985 specifications, which would include 65 underground parking spaces. He also wishes to move his Carmel Insurance Agency, now located over Nielsen's Market, into the new building complex.

"The question is, does anyone in this town have the opportunity to rebuild a business as it exists?" Little asked.

Current codes allow one motel unit per 1,000 sq. ft. of land. Carmel Sands has 42 units with a restaurant on 33,000 sq. ft. of land, which puts it at least nine units over current standards. The motel has a non-conforming use permit since it was built before the one unit per 1,000 sq. ft. code was adopted. The cocktail lounge in Simpson's is also a non-conforming use in the Service Commercial zone where the restaurant is located.

"To rebuild as a new business would mean eliminating one half of our business and that is not a thinkable alternative," Little said.

Businesses are allowed to remodel by 25 percent a year, but Little said that would not be as productive as rebuilding the entire complex.

"We are allowed to remodel 25 percent a year, but what do you get when you remodel? New plumbing maybe, but definitely not underground parking and you still have old buildings," Little said.

The Little family asked the city council in 1982 to adopt an ordinance to allow reconstruction of the motel and restaurant. The request was denied because the general plan was then under revision and the planning commission recommended that no changes be made in the code until the plan was adopted. Earlier in 1982, the planning commission had approved the building concept and architectural plans for the new building. The architect has since retired and the plans will have to be redone, Little said.

'The question is, does anyone in this town have the opportunity to rebuild a business as it exists?' Little asked.

THE GENERAL plan has been adopted and the Littles wish to approach the council again.

"We have held off up to this point, but now we have to do one or the other (remodel or rebuild). Some of these buildings were built in 1926 and need major overhauls," Little said. "We feel we must get permission to rebuild or a major remodeling permit within the next 120 days."

The Littles had closed Simpson's early in November with the change in mind. "We closed Simpson's in anticipation of rebuilding or remodeling," Little said. "We closed for the winter season in the hope of getting it done by next season.

"We thought we would call a spade a spade. Why approach the city council while our employees wondered whether they had a job or not tomorrow?"

"We started thinking seriously about doing this in 1978 and moved the Carmel Insurance Agency from the Sands building to above Nielsen's Market in preparation in September of 1980," Little said. "We wanted to show what we thought would be a nice continuation of a family-owned business."

THE OWNERS of the Carmel Sands Motel and Simpson's restaurant on San Carlos Street and Fifth Avenue — the Little family — would like to demolish the old buildings and replace them with new structures without losing their non-conforming use permits. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Hospital layoffs announced

Because of a sustained decrease in occupancy, Community Hospital and Monterey Peninsula Hospital will lay off 32 of their 1,100 employees, effective Nov. 29.

All other employees were told they would have to schedule paid or unpaid leave amounting to at least 10 percent of their scheduled hours each two-week pay period between Nov. 23 and next Feb. 1, reflecting expectations of a low holiday occupancy.

In addition, employees eligible for retirement were offered a bonus of twice the normal payoff for accumulated disability leave if they would choose by Dec. 1 to retire by Dec. 31.

Thomas E. Tonkin, president and chief executive officer, said the measures are designed to bring the staff to the level required for current bed need, which has been about 10 percent below normal for several months.

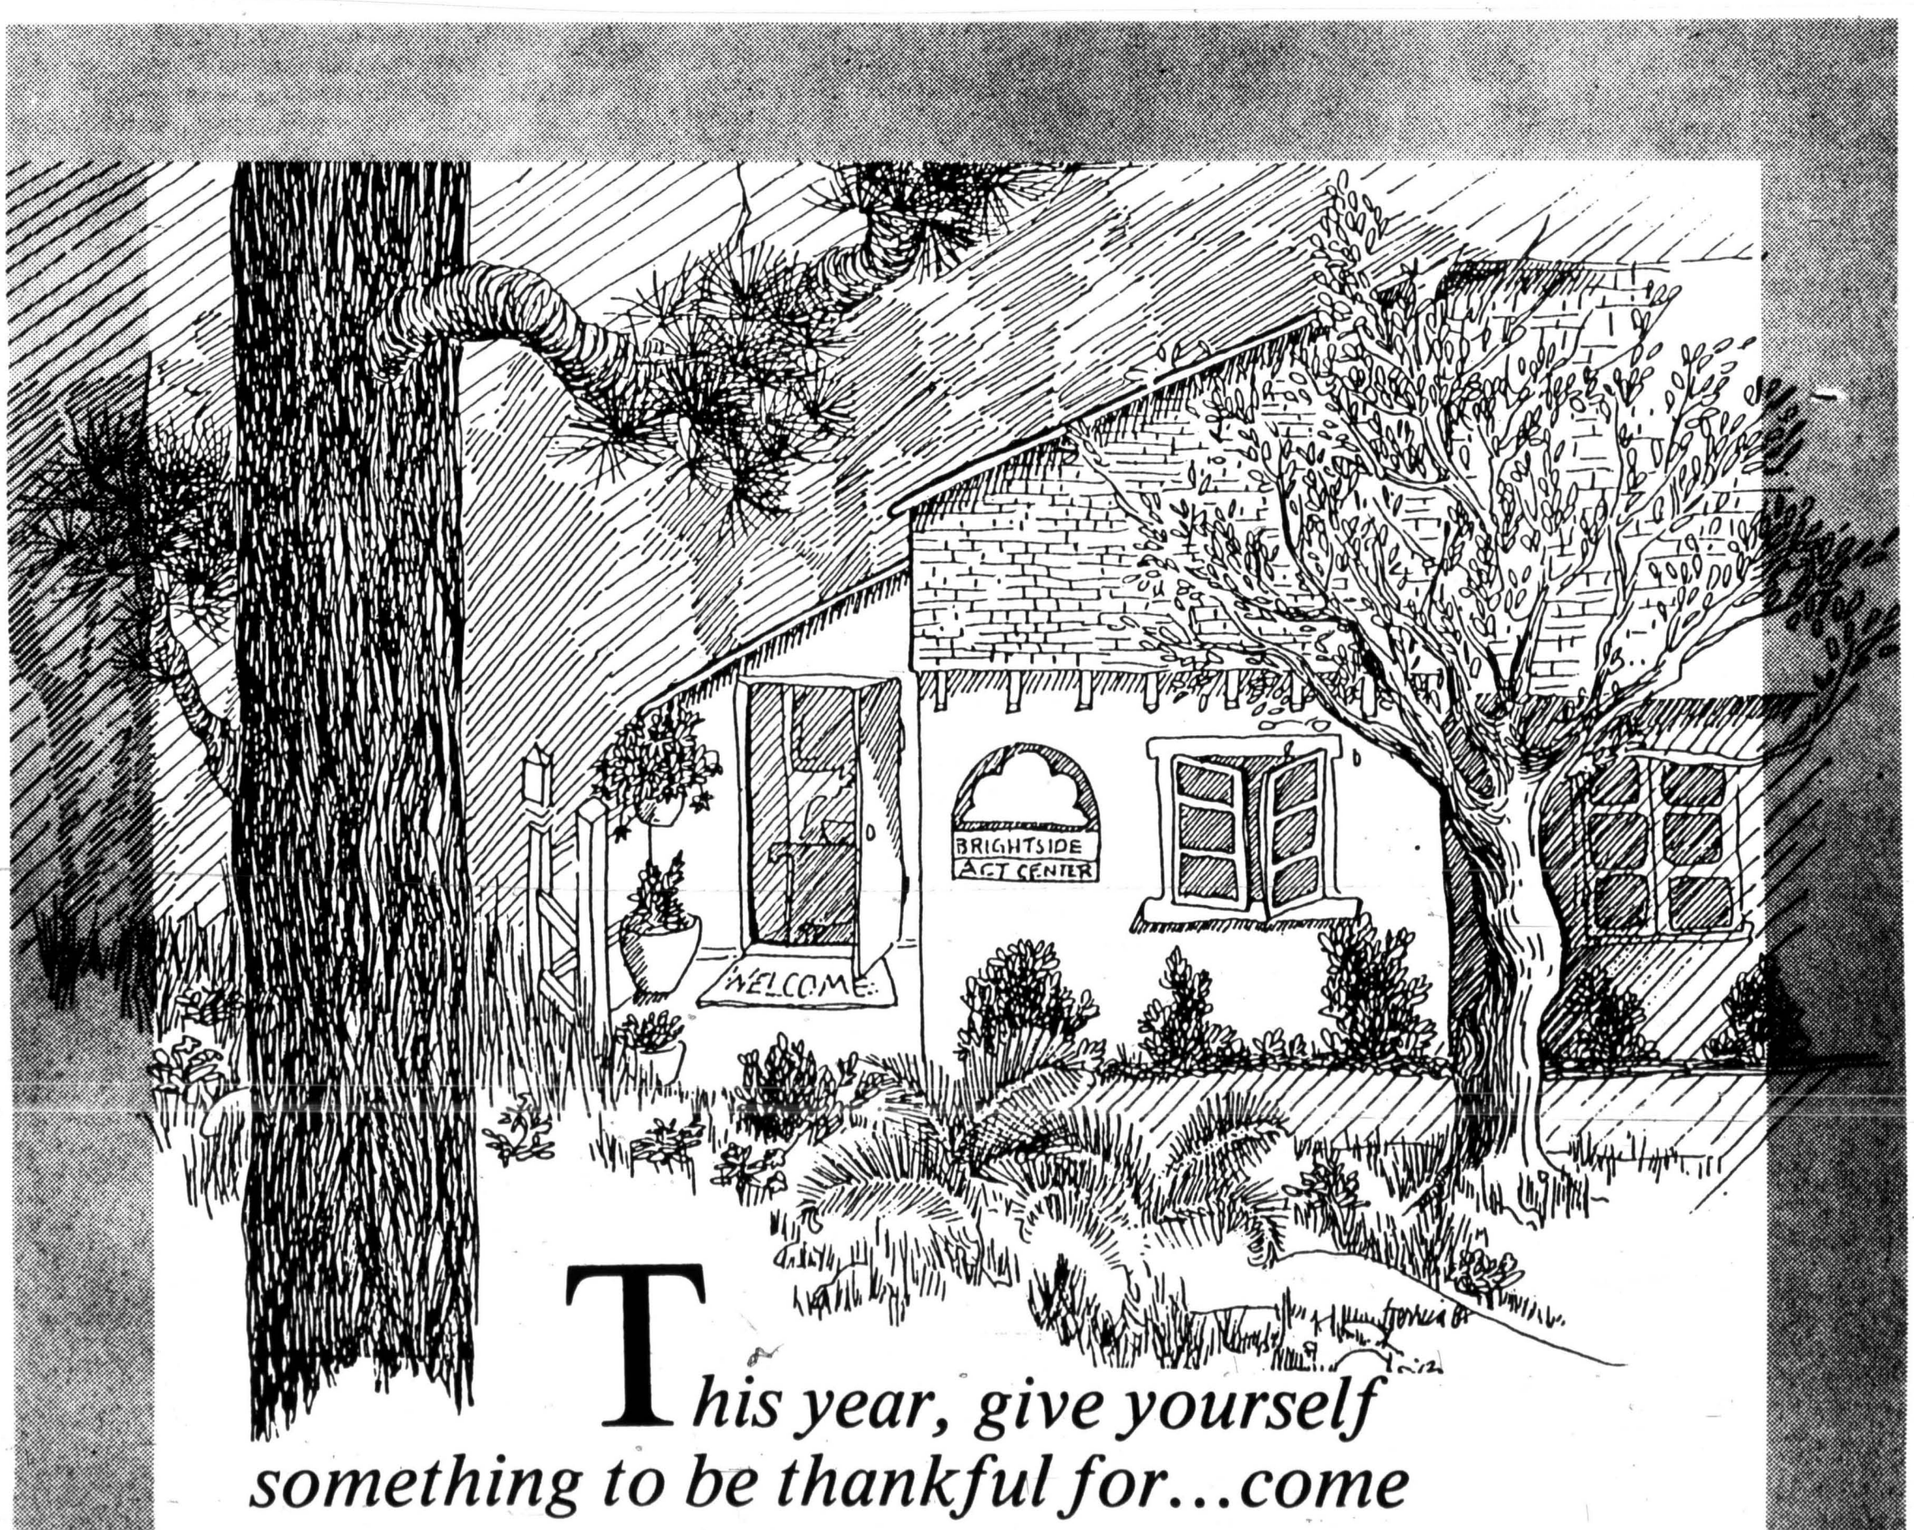
Combined occupancy for the two hospitals had been expected to run about 83 percent, but has averaged only 73 percent, he said.

Tonkin said the reduced census results primarily from recent changes in federal and state supported medical insurance programs.

Tonkin said employees affected by the layoffs will be given preferential hiring consideration over the next year when jobs become available for which they are qualified. He noted that if normal employee turnover patterns persist, the chances of laid off employees being rehired within a year are good.

Although 32 people were laid off, the hospital has eliminated the equivalent of 58 full-time positions by deciding not to fill vacancies and shifting some employees to positions in other departments where possible.

Of the 32 given notice, 18 worked in nursing services, including 11 registered nurses, three licensed vocational nurses, two aides and two unit receptionists.



This year, give yourself something to be thankful for...come to Brightside ACT Center and begin your recovery from drug or alcohol problems.

Trustee Clayton defends former superintendent

Bromfield's concerns and provides his response.

Mrs. Bromfield had complained that Rand did not carry out some of his administrative duties. "Review, revision and update (of board policies and procedures) has been totally ignored for a number of years," she claimed.

Clayton responded: "The total revisibn of the 'board policy manual' was never a high priority of any board during Bill Rand's administration.

"On the other hand, policies have been revised and others developed when specific needs have been identified by either the board or administration."

CLAYTON CITED numerous policy changes undertaken during Rand's tenure that included discipline, attendance, pupil retention, transportation and parent complaints.

And two of those Rand-directed policies — emergency preparedness and pupil transportation fees — were approved by Mrs. Bromfield, Clayton said.

Clayton provided a lengthy background to concerns Mrs. Bromfield raised about the disposal of surplus school property.

"The board, not the superintendent, makes decisions based on the disposal of surplus school sites. Mr. Rand was hired to administer the educational programs of the CUSD. He was not hired because of his expertise in real estate," Clayton wrote.

Clayton provided two pages of dated actions by Rand and the board to emphasize that the superintendent did his best in trying to sell the properties.

"In 1980 the board made a conscious decision to dispose of one or more of its unused school sites. The mandate of the board was to maximize the value of the property through whatever means to insure that the taxpayers receive the greatest return for the property."

Trustees accepted proposals from a variety of different Realtors and developers before they decided to hire the firm of Helix and Associates of Concord to represent the district, Clayton said.

"The major task for Daniel C. Helix was to obtain zoning changes and governmental approval to insure the taxpayers, through their school district, receive whatever increase in land value that may accrue from upgraded zoning rather than a private developer who purchases the property and conducts the rezoning process himself."

The district two years later hired attorney Brian Finegan to try and get "favorable" zoning in the revised Carmel Valley Master Plan, he wrote.

"These changes were necessary to insure maximum value of all potential unused school sites located within the boundaries of those two plans," he added.

Clayton's statement listed a variety of board actions that ranged from establishment of a calendar for selling the property to Helix's quitting.

"Because of the uncertainties of the Carmel Valley Master Plan, on Dec. 14, 1982, the board passed a resolution of intent to lease undeveloped school sites for agricultural purposes," Clayton wrote.

"It was the intent of the board to have some income from those properties while waiting for a more favorable real estate market to develop."

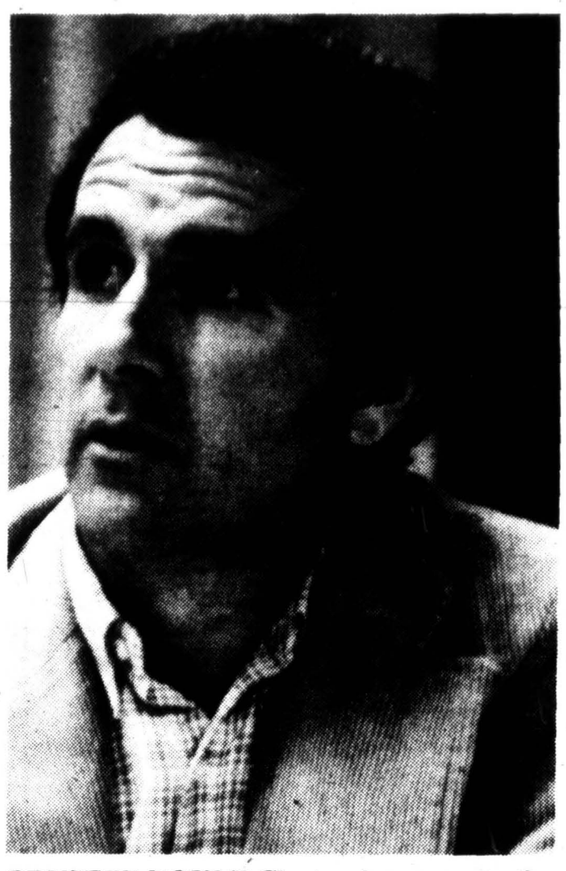
CLAYTON ARGUES that the slowness of the property sale was prompted by outside factors in 1982 that were beyond board control.

"It should be noted that in 1982 the district was attempting to market undeveloped property under the restraints of the Carmel Valley Master Plan (moratorium), high interest rates, severe water limitations and the complex education code requirements for disposal of unused school property," he wrote.

The board from April 26 to July 20, 1983 conducted a lengthy bid process, which did not get any response. Later, trustees successfully obtained a state waiver to avoid further lengthy legal complications over selling the property.

Meanwhile, trustees in early 1983 successfully leased two of the three surplus properties to a tree-growing operation, Clayton wrote.



TRUSTEE DOYLE Clayton has come to the defense of former Carmel Unified School District Supt. William Rand with an 11-page statement in response to some concerns raised earlier by fellow Trustee Susan Bromfield.

The property still is not sold; however trustees do have under consideration a plan to trade the 20-acre Scarlett Road site for about 2.5 acres of Pebble Beach property.

"These attempts to market the district's unused (property) were the result of board action. If someone finds fault with these procedures they should blame the board, not Mr. Rand," Clayton wrote.

"It should be noted that money derived from the sale of unused school sites cannot go into the school's general fund to purchase needed salary adjustments or additions to the curriculum. This money can only be used for deferred maintenance and capital outlay," he concluded.

Another complaint made by Mrs. Bromfield is that implementation of the middle school seven-period day was "a real disappointment to me."

She also raised concerns that trustees did not think they would have to spend as much as the extra class cost (about $100,000).

Clayton responded that the board had numerous discussion meetings on the seven-period day proposal and that trustees were given detailed cost analysis on transportation and adding teachers.

He pointed out that the seven-period day was a negotiable item that would have to be approved by teachers as part of their contract. A contract settlement still has not been reached.

"The district during negotiations tried to negotiate for teachers to teach six classes per day at the middle school," Clayton explained.

"With money being in short supply this year, the district was unsuccessful in its efforts to negotiate this item by the time school opened in September."

'THEREFORE the administration had no alternative but to implement a seven-period day at an estimated cost of $100,000."

Clayton agreed with Mrs. Bromfield's concerns about the board not being informed when key administrators are on vacation.

"This is an area of communication that needs to be improved," he wrote.

The vacation questions raised by Mrs. Bromfield also included inquiries about Rand's absence when papers had to be signed for the marketing of some of the district's surplus properties.

Clayton responded: "On June 18, 1984 the board authorized the superintendent to sign a contract with Porter-Marquard Realty to sell the Holt, Metz and Scarlett sites.

"Mr. Rand then requested the business manager, Mr. Ed Miyasaki, to research the current lease agreement along with the cancellation penalty on the Scarlett site and make that information available to Porter-Marquard Realty," he wrote.

"The lease agreement information was necessary in order to determine the ultimate selling price for the property.

"On July 2, 1984 Porter-Marquard Realty delivered the listing agreement to the CUSD office for signature. Mr. Rand and Mr. Miyasaki were on vacation (but) could be reached by telephone and their phone numbers were available at the district office. The listing papers were signed on July 2, 1984 by a board member."

Mrs. Bromfield's statement also raised questions about employee use of district vehicles as home-to-work transportation.

"There are three employees who drive district trucks home each evening. All three individuals work in the maintenance department and are on call during the evenings, on weekends, and on holidays to respond to emergencies through our 600 sq. mi. district," Clayton said.

"The trucks carry tools and equipment necessary to perform temporary repairs on vehicles and buildings.

"Changes to this practice would require the issue to be negotiated because such a change would affect an employee's working conditions," Clayton stated.

Clayton also responded to Mrs. Bromfield's complaints about infrequent employee evaluations.

Clayton said Interim Supt. Rich Hawkins has told him that "all certificated personnel (teachers) have been evaluated at least once during the past two years."

AND ALL but five of the classified staff have had "recent" evaluations. Those five are to be evaluated this year, Clayton wrote.

Mrs. Bromfield believes the board has not been kept abreast of staff and student accomplishments.

Clayton responded with more than one page of individual instances when the board honored teachers and students for their accomplishments.

Mrs. Bromfield wrote that "administrative job descriptions are out of date."

But Clayton responded that in at least one instance, the job title changed but the duties remained the same.

That instance was when Hawkins' title was changed from "director of pupil personnel, services, curriculum and instruction," to a more simplified "director of instruction."

But Clayton admitted a new job description has not been developed for Chuck Phillips, who used to oversee one department. Dan Yurkovich retired and the two jobs were combined into a "director of educational services," who basically is in charge of the regional occupation program and adult education services.

In response to another one of Mrs. Bromfield's concerns, Clayton wrote that there were five days this summer (July 20 and 23-26) when all central office administrators were on vacation.

However, Clayton stated that all of the administrators were available by telephone and their numbers were listed with the business office.

Mrs. Bromfield voiced concern over the maintenance of the buildings and that parents were forced to help weed and rake.

Clayton responded: "Deferring maintenance of buildings and grounds has been a conscious decision of the previous board due to lack of finances.

"The previous board spent many hours deliberating over where to cut maintenance and other non-classroom functions.

"The board made these cuts in an effort to spend our diminishing resources on such fine programs as six-period days at the secondary level (the middle school used to have just five classes), small class sizes at the elementary grades, athletics, classroom supplies and employee compensation."

Clayton pointed out that the sale of Carmel Woods Elementary School financed a $750,000 renovation of the high school this summer.

In response to Mrs. Bromfield's criticism of the budget, Clayton listed 12 separate sessions the board had on the budget.

"The board, not the administration, controls the budget development process," Clayton wrote.

Clayton also believes an agreement with former Business Manager Robert Zampatti is legal and proper.

The agreement, approved before Mrs. Bromfield's election, was for the district to place Zampatti's earnings of about $15,000 in a trust fund to pay his medical benefit payments.

The money was earned by Zampatti as a consultant to the district after his retirement and before the board hired a new business manager.

Mrs. Bromfield also questioned the public relations skills of the administration.

Clayton responded that the district has joined a consortium with other boards to work out long-range public relations efforts. He also cited several other instances of Rand's public relations efforts.

"I think the best public relations program is summed up in the accomplishments of our students," Clayton wrote.

"This school district will never be perfect and the district will always be working on areas that need improvement, but under Mr. Rand's leadership, the district was moving forward and was accomplishing most of its yearly stated objectives."

Carmel High students to present stage show

CARMEL HIGH School has launched an ambitious project that involves more than 80 students and five departments and combines a dance and fashion show with photographic and art exhibits.

The results of this undertaking will be seen in the original Padre production of Glamorous Life on the Sunset Center stage next week.

The dance and fashion show will be staged at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 29 and 30. Admission is a $1.50 donation. Tickets are available only at the door.

Before the show or at intermission, the audience can review an exhibit of selected high school students' art and photographs in the foyer of Sunset Center.

Student choreographers of the production are Marit Brook-Kothlow and Kathy Upham. The finale is a group-choreographed number, Ms. Hayes said.

The dance production costumes will be provided by the 1887 shop and Dance Centre of London.

Other departments in the school have also cooperated.

Jack Savage selected some photographs for exhibit, and Sue Williams-Pierik and Bill Stone chose other art works to be shown. Jay Criddle's computer class is preparing the program.

The program cover design was created by student Nushka Zaragoza.

For more information, contact the high school at 624-1821.

GLAMOROUS LIFE*, an ambitious Carmel High School dance and fashion show plus art and photographic exhibits will open on the Sunset Center stage for a two-day run Nov. 29-30. The show begins at 7:30 p.m. and admission is a $1.50 donation. The exhibits will be in the foyer. Above, four of the more than 80 students involved in the production rehearsed a dance number. School board to convene three sessions

THE CARMEL Unified School District Board of Education is to conduct three separate sessions Nov. 26.

Trustees will start their meeting day at 4 p.m. with a discussion of real estate issues. The meeting, which is open to the public, will be at the central office, south side of Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

The focus of that session will be a possible property exchange. A Pebble Beach property owner has offered to trade about two acres in the forest for the 20-acre Scarlett Road property valued at about $650,000 and owned by the district.

At about 5 p.m. trustees will meet in a separate open session with Elaine Boyce, who has been hired by the board to seek a replacement for former Supt. William Rand, who resigned Oct. 8.

If any of these two study sessions require action, trustees are not expected to vote until they reconvene in a regularly scheduled session at 7 p.m. at Tularcitos School off Ford Road in Carmel Valley.

Planners to consider Highlands use permit

A HOUSING project in Carmel Highlands and the use permit for Carmel Valley Disposal Service will be discussed by the Monterey County Planning Commission when it meets Thursday, Nov. 28, in the courthouse in Salinas.

At 10:15 a.m. commissioners are to consider the renewal of a use permit for the Carmel Valley Disposal Service transfer station.

At noon commissioners will review an application from Gary Snell for an amendment to the Carmel Area Land Use Plan.

Snell wants to build 14 homes scattered throughout a hilly 200-acre parcel on the east side of Highway 1 near Mal Paso Creek.

The land use plan states that he can build 16 homes, but the site is limited to the less-hilly western section of the property.

Wastewater workshop scheduled

The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, which will determine how to dispose of toxic waste water from the San Joaquin Valley, will present a public workshop on that subject in Monterey on Thursday, Nov. 29.

The workshop will take place at the Doubletree Inn in Montere from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Representatives of several federal agencies with jurisdiction over the issue will attend. They will provide a review of the current situation and respond to inquiries from the public.

Congressman Leon Panetta, who requested the meeting when he learned that the bureau was considering dumping the water in Monterey Bay or Morro Bay, was informed of the date in a letter he received from Lawrence F. Hancock, the Bureau of Reclamation acting mid-Pacific regional director.

The letter also stated that Monterey Bay and Morro Bay were only two of the many ocean locations considered for disposal of the waste water and that there were also a number of alternatives to ocean disposal.

Currently, the water is dumped into the Kesterson Reservoir, which is located in a national wildlife refuge. The discovery of a high incidence of mortality in birds that drink from the reservoir led the Bureau of Reclamation to seek out a new location to dispose of the water.

Monterey Bay was one of four sites considered in a report on the problem last year. However, when selenium, a tox substance dangerous to the environment, was discovered in the water, that report was scrapped, and a new study is being considered. Monterey Bay and Morro Bay are among the sites being considered in that study.

"I oppose the idea of dumping this toxic waste in either Monterey Bay or Morro Bay," Panetta said.

Planners to have special session

The Carmel Planning Commission has scheduled a special meeting for 4 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 28, at city hall.

Commissioners will discuss possible endorsement of a draft ordinance that would allow the city to implement a zoning tool called "specific plans."

A specific plan is similar to a city-wide general plan except that it focuses on uses and zoning allowed for a certain piece of property.

Commissioners also are to review what areas in the city should have specific plans.

Assistant Planning Director Diane White said the Gamble property certainly will be considered.

The specific plan idea was developed in response to the failed attempt by the city council to buy the 56,000 sq. ft. property that is between Dolores and Lincoln streets and 13th and Santa Lucia avenues.

Another area for a proposed specific plan is the R-4 zone, which allows for multiple housing projects such as condominiums and apartments. Most of the R-4 property in the city is north of Fifth Avenue, south of Third Avenue, west to Mission Street and east to Torres Street.

Library annex may qualify for federal building funds

FEDERAL funds may be available to help the Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees realize its goal of a new annex.

Library Director Margaret Pelikan will explain the availability of federal funds through the California State Library when the board meets at 4 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 27, at Carmel City Hall.

"I've been notified that between $2 and $3 million may become available for libraries all over the state for construction of library facilities," Mrs. Pelikan told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

Mrs. Pelikan said the funds also could be used to remodel the existing library building for maximum compatibility with the annex, if and when it is constructed.

Although the latest cost estimate for an annex that would extend onto Lincoln Street was $1.2 million, that figure is no longer valid until specific plans are agreed upon, she added.

The proposed annex would add another 6,000 sq. ft. of space to the existing 6,000 sq. ft. The library board has slightly more than $1 million accumulated in a special construction fund, but the annex plan has run into opposition both from the city council and from the public.

A group of residents and business people recently handed Mayor Charlotte Townsend a 306-signature petition opposed to the Lincoln Street expansion. The group wants the library annex question included in a city questionnaire to be mailed to residents.

Although the library is technically a part of Carmel city government, its day-to-day operation is overseen by the library board, which enjoys a high degree of autonomy from the Carmel City Council. The city, however, contributes general revenues each year toward library operations.

The city council backed off about three years ago from a plan to build a library annex with underground parking in conjunction with the Pine Inn on three city-owned lots on the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue and has adopted a go-slow attitude toward the annex since.

Urban forest is in transition

THE CARMEL urban forest is in a transitional phase with healthy young trees growing up to replace older dying trees, according to City Forester Gary Kelly.

The Carmel Forestry Commission will be presented with the latest data from the city tree survey when it meets at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 27, at Carmel City Hall.

"The survey shows that we have a young, healthy forest coming up, but we've been losing our upper canopy trees," Kelly told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

"It's just a natural process of the older trees dying, and there's been an increase in the total number of trees in the smaller sizes. About 45 percent of our urban forest is made up of Monterey pine."

In other business, the forestry commission is to discuss possible landscaping of the pond in Mission Trail Park with tree plantings, wildflowers and grasses.

The annual tree giveaway has been scheduled for 8 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 15, in the post office parking lot at Fifth Avenue and Dolores Street, Kelly said. The city will give away 3,000 pine, redwood, and douglas fir seedlings at a cost to the city of $500.

Trees will be given away on a first-come, first-served basis.

Regulation would halt CV backyard burning

CARMEL VALLEY is considered a "smoke sensitive" area by the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District and would be affected by a proposed ban on backyard burning to be aired in a public hearing Dec. 13. Although Carmel Valley is subject to atmospheric inversion layers, which produce smog, the proposed ban would be more for esthetic reasons than for air quality, according to district staff. (Photo by Alan McEwen.)

BACKYARD burning in Carmel Valley would be prohibited on parcels of less than one acre under a regulation set for hearing before the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District Dec. 13.

The hearing will commence at 1:30 p.m. at Watsonville City Hall, 250 Main St., Watsonville.

The proposed regulation was developed by air pollution staff after several hearings and workshops basically concerned with burning in the Valley, although the ordinance would affect the entire Monterey Peninsula, according to control officer Larry Odle.

"We've had complaints from the public in Carmel Valley to ban outdoor burning," Odle told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook. "We've concluded that Carmel Valley is a smoke-sensitive area and that a ban could be justified from esthetics or nuisance more than from a bad air quality standpoint."

Based on public workshops last April and July, the issue is an emotional one that should prompt considerable citizen comment, Odle said.

The district became concerned with backyard burning as the result of a complaint about a year ago which alleged adverse health effects and a general nuisance from open burning, Odle explained.

At an air pollution control district meeting April 19 in Salinas "speakers presented diametrically opposed recommendations," Odle wrote in a summary of the issue. "Opinions expressed covered the whole range of sentiments — from one end of the scale that all burning should be allowed to the other, that no burning whatsoever should be allowed, particularly in a smoke-sensitive area like Carmel Valley."

Subsequent public workshops were conducted April 19 in Salinas and July 11 in Carmel Valley. At the latter, public comment was about equally divided on the backyard burning ban, according to Odle's report.

In the absence of any compelling technical or environmental data upon which to base a decision, the agency — whose board of directors represents Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties — may have to decide the issue on a political basis, Odle said.

The matter is complicated by the fact that at least one member of the board of directors — Monterey County Supervisor William Peters — will step down at the end of the year.

FOUR OF THE seven members of the board of directors are Monterey County supervisors; two are Santa Cruz County supervisors; and one is a San Benito County supervisor.

The Monterey County board members are outgoing Supervisor Peters, plus Supervisors Barbara Shipnuck of Salinas, Dusan Petrovic of King City; and Marc Del Piero of Castroville.

The district became concerned with backyard burning as the result of a complaint about a year ago which alleged adverse health effects and a general nuisance from open burning.

"We will probably recommend that the board continue the matter until January, when the two new supervisors have been seated in Monterey County, and take time to resolve the issue," Odle said.

The 1,300-member Carmel Valley Property Owners Association has taken no stance on the proposed backyard burning ban.

"There are no esoteric or scientific data to decide it," Odle told the Carmel Pine Cone/-Carmel Valley Outlook. "The decision will be based on sociological aspects rather than any data that the air in Carmel Valley is bad.

"My personal opinion is that within 10 years, if growth isn't stopped in Carmel Valley, it will have to be banned entirely because of air quality issues."

THE VALLEY SAGE

BY VICTORIA ANDREWS

Steelhead season is delayed

ANXIOUS anglers who have spent the last weeks refurbishing their tackle boxes in anticipation of the Nov. 15 opening of steelhead season on the Carmel River were in for a disappointment.

Despite the recent rains, there still was not enough water in the lower reaches of the river to lure the wily fish upstream.

Mas Yokogawa, one of the active masterminds of the Carmel River Steelhead Association, told the Sage that because the river is so low, the group also has delayed its plans to release the thousands of young steelhead they have been caring for in the California-American Water Co. holding pond by Schulte Road.

That babysitting project is one of the first endeavors anywher e to raise wild steelhead in a quasi-natural setting, according to Yokogawa. It appears the effort has brought success.

When the steelhead association rescued the fish from their certain demise in the drying riverbed several months ago, they weighed in at 50 to the pound and were estimated to number around 12,000. Now the average is 12.6 fish per pound — not large enough to be part of the menu, but big enough to indicate that their diet of medicated artificial food, like alluvial Cheerios, has been adequate for survival.

The experiment was not without setbacks. The first batch of rescued fish that were transplanted to the Schulte pond had fatally bad luck.

Overly warm water is blamed for the severe fungus infection that eventually killed the young trout. But the stalwarts tried again. This time they provided more shade over the pond and added aerators in the water to keep it cool and well-oxygenated. Also, they medicated the pond with malachite at regular intervals.

Yokogawa said there are no biologists in the association, but added that they work closely with the Department of Fish and Game. "We're learning," was his assessment of the project, which the group plans to repeat whenever necessary in coming years.

Those Steelhead Association fellows — I think they're all fellows — are truly committed to the preservation of the fish habitat and to the enforcement of strict regulations about how and when the fish may be caught.

Throughout the season, they act as an ad hoc arm of Fish and Game to watch for poachers and, especially, fish snaggers.

Dealing with angling outlaws can be hazardous, and it takes courage and commitment to patrol the river when one could just go fishing instead. Cheers to these bold souls for their tireless efforts to improve both the image of the fisherman and the environment of the fish.

THE CARMEL Valley Subdivision Evaluation Committee elected the ubiquitous Dick Dalsemer as chairman and lawyer Robin Beare as vice-chairman at its Nov. 15 meeting.

The Sage asked Ms. Beare whether she felt the committee served much of a purpose at this time, in view of the continuing snags in the ratification of the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

"This is a very complicated thing!" Beare responded. "We're being educated. Right now it's like going to school, getting ready for the test. When we evaluate the subdivision, that's the test."

Whether the master plan actually gains final county approval on Nov. 29 or not, Beare said the committee has to be ready to proceed as though the problems will be resolved at any time. They expect to meet with county planner Dave Young at their next session Dec. 13, to go over the master plan in careful detail.

The evaluation committee addresses proposals of a residential nature only, whether the request is for a major, minor or standard development project.

Carmel Valley subdivisions poised for county approval to the board of supervisors to make a final decision.

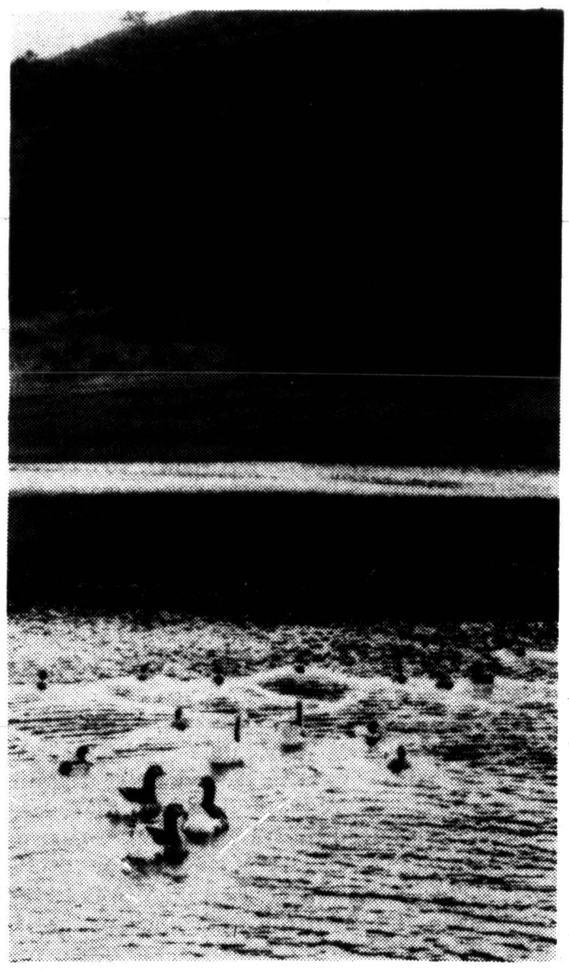
Stringent review of each project is mandated by the master plan and its allocation system, which allows only 1,181 new lots of record to be developed in the next 20 years. The existing approximately 1,000 lots of record are not subject to the allocation system.

For the first year there will be just 118 new lots of record allowed. Because there are far more proposals than lots available, the county will allow development of those that best suit the requirements in the master plan covering such issues as traffic, views, environmental damage, and water availability.

A county-provided list of proposals in various stages of application confirms the demands developers will make on the Valley.

Following is a list of projects before the county that have just been suggested with no formal application, are in the EIR stages, or which have a completed environmental impact report and are just waiting for the master plan to be adopted.

- The Fiskdale Ranch on the north side of Carmel Valley Road near mid-Valley. The developers have applied for 130 lots on 2,180 acres.
- Canada De Segunda, north side of Carmel Valley Road about four miles east of Highway 1. There developers propose a 170-lot project on 910 acres.
- La Cuesta, east of Canada De Segunda, 203 lots and nearly 497.3 acres.
- Holt Ranch, near mid-Valley, 214 units on 473 acres.
- Veeder Ranch, near the Village, 30 units on 81 acres.
- River Oaks, east of Garland Park, 24 units on 84.4 acres.
- Quail Meadows, behind Quail Lodge known as Porter's Bowl, 65 units on 615 acres. About 40 hotel units also are planned, but visitor-accomodations are not in the perview of the subdivision evaluation committee.
- Cypress Greens, near the mouth of the Valley, no formal application on file now. A previous proposal requested 50 units on 13.7 acres.
- Carmel Valley Airport, north of the Village, no application on file. The last application that was denied requested 110 condominiums on 29.37 acres.
- The Odello site, east side of Highway 1 about a half-mile south of Rio Road, 162-units on 134 acres. The Odellos had petitioned Silver to exclude their property from the master plan, but that challenge was denied.



PORTER'S BOWL, a secluded meadow area behind Quail Lodge in Carmel Valley (above), may become a residential and hotel site if the Carmel Valley Master Plan is certified and developer Ed Haber wins a building allocation from the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Clarification

A CHART published in last week's Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook showing the precinct breakdown of voting in the Nov. 6 presidential election for the Carmel and Carmel Valley area may have been confusing because of the omission of identities of various races.

Reading from the left of the chart, the identifications for the columns of figures should have read: Fifth District Monterey County Supervisor, Measure A, 28th Assembly, 17th Senate, 16th Congress, President.

Speaks at Pebble Beach forum

Scientist doubts need for 'Star Wars' weapons

By ELAINE TAYLOR

'MAKING nuclear weapons impotent and obsolete is not something 'Star Wars' can even address, much less accomplish,'' declared aeronautical engineer Robert M. Bowman at a Nov. 5 meeting of the New Forum at Pebble Beach.

Since this argument about high-technology defense went on in the late 1960s and culminated in the signing and ratification of the ABM treaty in 1972, ''why are we re-examining this whole question of ballistic missile defense?'' was a question Bowman posed to the audience of approximately 140.

Bowman retired from the Air Force as a lieutenant colonel in 1978. At that time, he was director of advanced space programs development for the Air Force.

He is now president of the Institute for Space and Security Studies, an independent, non-profit organization located in Potomac, Md.

A graduate of the Armed Forces Staff College and the Air War College, he received his Ph.D. degree in aeronautical and nuclear engineering from the California Technological Institute.

The ABM treaty specifically prohibited ''not only the deployment of space-based ABM systems, but even the development of components for such systems,'' he said. ''So what has changed since then?'' he asked. In the late 1960s and early 1970s we were considering ground-based point defenses with ballistic missile defense interceptors around each of the targets needing protection, Bowman said.

''This turned out to be somewhat feasible in the case of protecting our missile silos, although the radars required for that are rather large and vulnerable,'' he said. He added that these systems are totally unfeasible to protect the cities and villages of the United States.

The new developments since 1972 come from improved technology. ''If you can get them in the boost phase, the whole problem looks different. First, they're much more visible, sitting on top of huge rockets with enormous fiery tails visible to infrared sensors at some 23,000 miles out in space.''

Second, he pointed out that ballistic missiles are far more vulnerable in the boost phase, before they've dispensed their warheads. The warheads themselves are coated with a substance that enables them to re-enter the atmosphere without incineration, so they are not very vulnerable to a laser beam attempting to destroy them, he said.

Third, ''if you can get them in the boost phase, you've got a lot fewer targets to deal with,'' Bowman said. As he explained, currently there are only 1,400 ICBMs to deal with, but once the boost phase is over those ICBMs are free to dispense their multiple warheads — as many as 10 today, perhaps 20 in a few years.

In addition, the missiles dispense a few hundred decoys that look to our sensors exactly like the real ones. ''That enormously complicates the job of the battle management computer that has to sort all of this out, track each of the individual targets and assign them to defensive systems,'' Bowman said.

BOOST PHASE is riddled with problems since it occurs right in the middle of the Soviet Union and you have to ''get a line of sight on it,'' he said. ''The boost phase lasts a very short time, somewhere between 40 and 300 seconds. During that short time you have to intercept and destroy 1,400 targets.''

Putting a defensive system such as this into space means that every once in a while it passes over the missile fields and is capable of doing its job. This means that you need 15 or 20 more of these orbiting systems than you need to do the destruction, since most of their time is spent on the wrong side of the world, he explained.

''These defensive battle stations would be extremely visible; the Soviets would know they were there; they would have to accede to us placing them there — one of the few things that is within range of their crude anti-satellite system that they've been trying to test for the last 10 or 15 years,'' Bowman said. ''They could destroy it at any time of their choosing. Probably just before they launched an attack,'' he said.

Bowman added that besides their anti-satellite system, the Soviets could destroy these space battle stations with tiny space mines that ''tag along in orbit, maybe a few hundred feet from our stations, and could be exploded at the push of a button, again just in time to clear the way for an avalanche of ballistic missiles.

''There are counter-measures available for high energy laser battle stations, for particle beams, for x-rays, and you name it,'' Bowman said. One of his main jobs, when directing the ''Star Wars'' program for the Air Force, was to develop counter-measures if the Soviet Union should develop such a system. ''We would have several measures already worked out that could render it useless.''

''If the Soviets chose not to destroy our 'Star Wars' system and not to implement any of the many counter-measures available, they could still deliver as many nuclear weapons as they wanted to the United States, using alternative delivery systems,'' he said.

Even if the ''Star Wars'' system worked 100 percent it could do nothing about low-angle, submarine-launched ballistic missiles that stay within the protective blanket of the atmosphere where they are safe from such systems, Bowman said.

BOWMAN completely discounted the former speaker at the New Forum, Peter Vajk, who spoke in favor of ''Star Wars'' on Oct. 15. Vajk claimed that the technology for ''Star Wars'' had been demonstrated with an Army homing overlay experiment.

''The point is, that experiment has nothing to do with 'Star Wars,' '' Bowman claimed. ''It demonstrated that you could use an ICBM to destroy one of the warheads of an ICBM. This means that it would take 10 Minutemen to shoot down the warheads from one Soviet SS-18.'' Such a plan is ''even less feasible than the approach we discarded in the late 1960s.''

City may buy senior housing lots

A LONG-SOUGHT city goal to obtain enough Dolores Street property for a senior citizen housing complex appears to be a reality.

The city was the successful bidder Nov. 8 in an Amador County estate sale of two lots on the west side of Dolores Street between Fifth and Fourth avenues.

The council is expected to approve the $314,200 purchase price when it meets at 4 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 6, at city hall.

The council earlier this fall had directed staff to seek sites for a senior citizen housing complex. That direction also allowed staff to make a bid on the two lots contingent on council approval afterward.

The two properties are adjacent to three lots already bought by the city at a cost of a little more than $400,000.

Originally, the council had planned to donate two lots to an organization such as the Carmel Foundation for a 20-unit senior citizen housing complex.

Voters in Nov. 1980 authorized the city to buy the original property for $270,000 with the stipulation that it be used for senior citizen housing.

The plan stalled until 1982 when a special committee began meeting with various private and state agencies on plans for a housing project. But the council in 1983 determined that two lots were too small for such a large project. The decision was made easier when inquiries proved that three adjacent lots would soon be on the market.

The council obtained a third adjacent lot this fall for about $135,000.

Preliminary discussions currently underway with the Monterey County Housing Authority envision the agency building a senior citizen housing complex on the five lots.

And the city plans to talk with the Carmel Foundation to determine whether that agency wishes to operate the complex once it is constructed.

The new purchase attempt also was contingent on whether the planning commission ruled that the buy is consistent with the zoning objectives of the 1983 general plan.

the paper undermines that relationship that we work so hard to achieve," he added.

'LET ME once again assure you that we are professionals and students are our most important business," Lynch concluded.

Mrs. Kading-Kelly expressed similar thoughts in her statement.

"I proudly speak for the staff at Carmel High School when I emphatically state that no Carmel High School teacher, administrator, or classified employee would ever retaliate against a student whose parent actively participated in any political action," she worte.

"I am deeply hurt and offended by remarks quoted in the Monterey Peninsula Herald and the Carmel Pine Cone insinuating that these highly professional staff members would engage in such demeaning behavior," Mrs. Kading-Kelly states.

A separate statement signed by several members of the high school faculty senate expressed anger at the remarks.

"We are outraged and shocked that unsubstantiated charges have been made in the area's newspapers that there is a reluctance on the part of many people to show their support for trustees involved in a recall controversy because 'there will be some kind of reflection on their kids from teachers'," the faculty statement says.

"A statement of this nature is a slur on the professionalism and integrity of the district teaching staff and administration.

"Parents of students who attend or who have attended the district's schools know that the staff would never engage in nor endure such behavior.

"Those few individuals who suggest that this could occur are perhaps attempting to explain a reluctance on the part of the community to support their point of view," the statement concluded.

Several parents — all long-time volunteers in the district — have called this newspaper to express fear that if they speak out their children may be targets of unfair criticisms from their peers or from teachers.

An impasse in the teacher contract negotiations has been declared and a negotiator from the Public Employees Relations Board is expected to come in later this month or in early December to attempt to break the deadlock.

The recall committee is going door-to-door seeking signatures on petitions to place the recall before voters. They need signatures of 20 percent of the approximately 17,000 voters who reside within the school district boundaries.

The committee refuses to say how many signatures it has gathered thus far.

GISLA DEWEY has been appointed executive director of the Carmel Chapter of the Red Cross to replace Jean Snow, who retired Oct. 31 after a decade in that position.

New Red Cross chief to seek young people

YOUNG people will be recruited actively to become volunteers in the Carmel Red Cross Chapter, says new executive director Gisla Dewey.

Ms. Dewey took over the helm of the local Red Cross chapter Oct. 31 upon the retirement of 10-year director Jean Snow. She brings a broad background of experience in disaster work to her new assignment.

"We need to get youth involved in the Red Cross for it to survive," Ms. Dewey told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook. "I can't send one of our ladies on the desk who's 70 years old to go out in the mud to do disaster work.

"We need young people to do CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation), first aid, and other kinds of disaster work. Most of our volunteers now are older," she added.

To that end, Ms. Dewey plans to seek volunteers through the local news media and through direct, classroom contact with students at Carmel High School.

Ms. Dewey also would like to expand the chapter safety program — specifically to insure that all Carmel restaurant workers have some training in CPR and in first aid, in the event a patron is stricken.

And the new Red Cross official has some strategies to deal with "the next big one" (earthquake) or with future mudslides in the Big Sur area.

"We need to train people in disaster assessment, mass shelter care, mass feeding, and individual family safety," she said. Ms. Dewey, who is a Red Cross veteran of the recent Coalinga earthquake, said there is much the Red Cross can do to help affected families reconstruct their lives.

"In Coalinga, the Red Cross bought the building materials and got the Mennonites to rebuild homes through a national agreement we have with them," she noted. "The Red Cross can go in anytime to help in a disaster and can move faster than the government agencies. In Coalinga, it took state and county agencies three days to get organized after the earthquake."

For Ms. Dewey, her latest position is a return to the Monterey Peninsula. As the wife of an Army officer assigned to the Naval Postgraduate School, Ms. Dewey was hired in 1980 as a case worker for the Monterey Red Cross. She was later promoted to director of services to military families.

In June of 1982, she moved to Fresno as director of disaster services — which included mass relief for the victims of the Coalinga earthquake. She remained in that position until she returned to the Monterey Peninsula last month.

"The blood program is fine, but we know 'the big one' is coming," Ms. Dewey said. "We need to educate each family how to turn off their gas, how to get relief, how to survive. A major effort of mine will be to educate families."

Jean Snow joined the local chapter as executive director in 1974 and oversaw all activities of the agency, which serves Carmel, Carmel Valley, Big Sur and the South Coast areas. Under her guidance, the chapter joined forces to form the Red Cross/Community Hospital Blood Program, which serves the blood needs of the entire peninsula.

Symphony fund drive starts

THE MONTEREY County Symphony Association kicks off its 1984-85 fund campaign this month with an announced goal of $240,000 to be met by the end of the fiscal year — May of 1985.

Fund-raising committee chairman Kenneth Schley is optimistic: "We're well on our way already. With a pledge of $52,500 from the Symphony Guild and funds amounting to $193,098 already raised this fiscal year, we're over half way toward our goal. It seems reasonable to expect the remainder will come in from individuals and businesses. Their response so far has been very encouraging."

William G. Doolittle, president of the Symphony Association, said this is a pivotal year for the symphony.

"Following the musical leadership of Maestro Haymo Taeuber over the past 16 years, the symphony association is in the midst of a search to select a new conductor. Over 175 applications have been reviewed," Doolittle said.

"The six who are appearing as guest conductors this season are some of the finalists in our search. Last season Carter Nice, music director and conductor of the Sacramento Symphony, and Thomas Conlin, music director of the Charlotte (West Virginia) Symphony, made guest appearances with our orchestra. In the spring of 1985, one of these eight men will be selected to take the baton and lead our symphony into another era of growth and refinement."

"As is always the case in performing arts, ticket sales alone account for only a small percentage of total income; in this case 20 percent of the amount needed to maintain a symphony orchestra of this quality," said Elizabeth Pasquinelli, general manager. "Without the support of this community, our programming would definitely suffer, and we wouldn't be able to keep ticket prices within reach of everyone who wants to enjoy the performances."

Fund-raising goals for the 1984-85 season are as follows:

Total budget	$438,479
Earned Income (tickets, interest, etc.)	96,681
Fund Drive (contributed income)	239,928
Symphony Guild	52,500
Government	37,370
Endowment Income	12,000

In addition to Chairman Schley, those who serve on the Symphony Fund Raising Committee this year are Norma Daberry Norris, chairwoman of individual giving; Lynwood Bronson, Barbara Hall, Howard Healey, Beps Mumford, and Gaylord Nelson.

Those in charge of corporate and business giving are Alva D. Andrus, Brian Finegan, Donald M. Hart and Thomas Treanor. Working on Planned Giving are Kenneth Schley, Bruce Freet and Saul Weingarten. Coordinating the fund-raising efforts of the committee is the symphony director of development, Donna Kneeland.

HANS FURTH TO SPEAK NOV. 26

Monday, Nov. 26, child development specialist Hans Furth will address Santa Catalina faculty, parents and the public on the application of Jean Piaget's theories of learning to the education and rearing of children in a talk titled "Piaget on Knowledge and Emotion." The 7:30 p.m. lecture is free and open to the public.

A professor at the Youth Research Center at the Catholic University of America since 1960, Furth spent two years in Geneva as a visiting professor working with Piaget. He is the author of Piaget and Knowledge, Piaget for Teachers, and co-author of Thinking Goes to School.

The Santa Catalina Pre-School and Lower School will jointly sponsor Furth's visit. Melanie Dugan, director of the lower school, said:

"Furth brings a fresh perspective to environments for learning. All of us who are involved with young people are necessarily concerned with the factors that maximize development.

"Piaget's theories, clarified by Dr. Furth, focus on learning and the creation of knowledge through interaction with the environment: other people, materials, texts, experiences."

Furth spent two years working with Jean Piaget, a Swiss biologist and epistomologist, who is, in the opinion of Pre-School Director Kathleen Ryan, "one of the most important contributors to our understanding of child development in this century." An interpreter of Piaget for both teachers and parents, Furth is also a concert pianist and the father of seven children.

Santa Catalina Lower School students will have their Thanksgiving vacation extended one day on Nov. 26 to allow the faculty to enjoy a full day of lecture and interaction with Furth.

The evening lecture is open to the public and will take place in the Performing Arts Center of Santa Catalina School on Mark Thomas Drive in Monterey.

"CURVED BRISTLES MAKE SENSE"

SPIRULINA: THE FOOD OF THE FUTURE IS HERE NOW.
Spirulina Plankton is the most basic substance in the whole food chain... Spirulina's high-quality protein contains 18 of 22 amino acids required for health — and all eight essential amino acids in the correct proportion. Protein such as this is rarely found in non-animal sources, so Spirulina is popular with vegetarians. And Spirulina's protein, which provides sustaining energy to the human body, is up to 95 percent, digestible as compared with beef's 20 percent. Several kinds of unusual proteins called biliproteins which occur naturally in our own bodies are found in Spirulina. Spirulina is low in calories, fats and sodium and amazingly high in efficient proteins (containing 60 to 71 percent) and all the cell salts and enzymes for body metabolism.

A doll of a gift

IF YOU'RE stuck on that special present this Christmas for a little girl, you might try the Carmel Doll Shop and Hospital in the Court of the Golden Eagle on Lincoln Street where that unique doll for only $6,000 can be found. Or perhaps the special Portrait Jumeau French Bisque doll for a mere $12,000.

Even if one is not in the market for the refined European antique dolls, it is a good place to visit old toy friends like Toni, Barbie, Madame Alexander dolls, Betsy Wetsy and Tiny Tears, all dolls that are now collector's items. Owners Adrienne and Harvy Zisser even have the elusive Cabbage Patch doll, which Mrs. Zisser said is the "most sought-after doll today.

"We have it in the original soft sculpture and the vinyl Coleco model," Mrs. Zisser said.

The oldest dolls in the shop are European bisque — which is unglazed porcelain or china — and china dolls from France and Germany. They date back as far as the early 1800s, and some are as large as a child.

One type of the rarest is the Portrait Jumeau, whose faces are so refined and real-looking it is a common, though probably erroneous, belief that the faces were taken from molds of real children.

"According to the doll expert at the Smithsonian, they are called portrait simply because they are so lifelike," Mrs. Zisser explained.

Although the dolls come in all sizes, it is not the size but the rarity of the model number that sets the price and the popularity of the doll, the Zissers said.

"The antique dolls are almost all European," Mrs. Zisser said. "The doll market was almost exclusively French and German until the 1900s, when economic problems hit the doll manufacturers. The quality went down, and they started to mass produce the dolls. Bisque dolls disappeared in the 1940s. They have come back in reproductions, some of which are so good it takes an expert to tell the difference."

"There is a lot of counterfeiting going on now because of the high price of the dolls," she added.

Doll collectors are the third largest group of collectors in the United States, right after Teddy Bear collectors and stamp collectors, Mrs. Zisser said.

American dolls entered the market with the Effanbee dolls in 1910, and that firm is still the largest manufacturer of dolls in America. The "most prestigious doll in America," according to Mrs. Zisser, is the Madame Alexander doll, which was first made in 1923.

"They are very well made and have a lot of attention to detail," Mrs. Zisser said. "Every girl had or wanted a Madame Alexander doll."

The dolls are still made, but are not shipped often because they do not ship well, Mrs. Zisser said. They can be found on the East Coast more than in the West, she added.

All the dolls at the shop, whether fragile bisque or vinyl, were once some child's doll.

"Some were 'Sunday' dolls. It sat on the shelf all week and the child was allowed to play with it on Sunday. Some came with heads and bodies that detached or were separate, so the mother could make a new body or attach a new head. Some mothers would order the head and make the body themselves," Mrs. Zisser said. "Most of the antique dolls were owned by children of wealthy families."

MEET "Hilda," a $7,500 bisque doll made in the 1900s by German doll manufacturer Kestner. She is one of the many antique and collectible dolls to be found in the Carmel Doll Shop and Hospital, which opens Nov. 23 in the Court of the Golden Eagle on Lincoln Street.

The clothes on the dolls are either the original — which is very rare — antique clothes or clothes made now by people who specialize in making doll clothes. The Zissers are looking for someone in the peninsula area who can make clothes for them.

Mrs. Zisser had a doll shop in Long Beach in the 1970s, but found that she "would rather collect than sell at that time." The Zissers decided to move to Carmel — a move they always had said "someday" to, after Harvey Zisser was taken seriously ill two years ago.

"We decided, 'why wait?' " Zisser said. "It is something we always dreamed of and now we have done it. We just did not expect to do it this soon."

GOURMET TAKE-OUT MEALS IN C.V.

For Ann Berthoin and her daughter, Paola, "special sauce" on their take-out food from Coco La Fleur in the Valley Hills Center in Carmel Valley means something that goes with pheasant and chanterelles mushrooms.

Or a marsala for Italian sausage with fennel. Both dishes are two examples of the type of food they will serve from the gourmet take-out meals and pastries shop patterned after shops in New York and Los Angeles.

"It is like the Silver Palate in New York," Mrs. Berthoin said. "It is a place someone can come and get anything he or she needs for a meal service. If the customer wants to, he can leave a casserole in the morning and pick it up filled in the evening."

"The menu will change weekly, with specials every week, which will help us find out what are the tried-and-true entrees. Everything will be more on the gourmet line. Besides the main dishes, we have salads, homemade soups, french breads and savory breads — which are new to this area — and french pastries," Mrs. Berthoin said. "We will even have a line of low-salt meals for people who need and want those.

"There is a small amount of sit-down space for those who want something like a bowl of soup, but it is not really a big restaurant. We are keeping it on a plastics line for dishes."

Mrs. Berthoin suggested that it is better to call and order if the customer wants an entree.

"I want the food to be fresh and try to keep everything as immediate as possible. It is best to call in the morning and place an order. I will prepare it in one of my own dishes or the customer's dish, whichever the customer wants," Mrs. Berthoin said. "We will always have something such as cold roasted meat or chicken; no one will go away disappointed, but people may not be able to get an exotic casserole on a short notice."

The pastries are made by Paola, who was the pastry chef for Picasso's restaurant.

"Everything will be made from scratch with no shortcuts. My daughter is quite ferocious about that," Mrs. Berthoin said.

Mrs. Berthoin learned a great deal about cooking during the many years she spent in Europe, where she opened a restaurant. She has lived in Carmel Valley for 20 years during which time she has taught French at Santa Catalina School, worked on her enamel-on-copper painting and continued to cook.

She and her daughter plan to cater as well as work in the shop.

"I hope to do Christmas dinners, or at least part of them. I would advise early orders for the holidays," Mrs. Berthoin said.

The shop will be closed Thanksgiving.

CARMEL'S NEWEST GALLERY/WORKSHOP

The most recent working artist studio and gallery in Carmel is in operation, tucked away in the Redwood Court on Mission Street. Orlando's Hide-A-Way Studio and Gallery is a small part of the history of Carmel when artists worked and sold their works in the village.

James Ogle, the artist/owner of Orlando's Hide-A-Way, has lived on the peninsula for three years and felt that Carmel is one of the best places he has found for artists.

"Carmel is an artist's stomping ground and an artist's town," Ogle said. "There is so much scenery to paint. The people are more conscious of artists and the local paper — you know, the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook — is more supportive of artists."

"I moved to Santa Barbara for a while, but I kept coming back here," he added. Ogle began his studio because he said he needed a place to work and sell retail.

"If I have my own place it is mine, while if I go through another gallery they get 50 percent," he said. "I still have my work in other galleries, though. It is a struggle selling art. I really have to hustle.

"I would like to get into more oils and less commercial work," Ogle said. "I would like to do some more portraits, either oils or pencil. If I can get a backer, I would like to do a women of the Monterey Peninsula calendar."

Ogle said he welcomes visitors to the gallery and hopes the locals will come to watch him work.

"The local people here are very, very artistically aware," he said.

FUTONS AND SUCH MOVES OUTLET

Futons and Such has moved from its original location on Foam Street to 639 B Lighthouse Avenue in Monterey for a very good reason. The store has tripled its space needs in the two years since owner Joni Caldwell opened its doors.

Store manager Shirmaine Jones said she believes "the return to healthy products and the fact that people are using more natural fibers contributes to our popularity. Also, the housing shortage in California has people living in studios and two-room homes.

"They want the rooms to be functional, not with a bed sitting in the middle of it, especially a king or queen size, and the futon folds up and out of the way or into a usable cushion.

"A futon is an all-cotton mattress with cotton batting that evolved about 4,000 years ago in the Mid-East when cotton was first domestically grown. The Japanese adopted it about 2,000 years ago and have perfected it," she said.

"In addition to the traditional cotton futons, we now have foam futons that are three blocks of foam in one cover which allows them to be folded up into one block.

"Both types provide a very firm sleeping surface while cushiony enough for support of the curve of the spine and the neck."

The new space gave Ms. Caldwell the chance to expand the inventory. The store now sells the Balans chair, which uses the knees for support rather than the back, shoji screens and blinds, zafus and azbutons meditation cushions filled with natural fiber kapok, and "we are the only place in the area that carries Tatami mats," Ms. Caldwell said. "The mat is the traditional Japanese flooring of compressed rice straw with a reed cover."

SUNSET HOUSE OWNER SETTLES IN

Geraldine Emory, the new owner of the Sunset House bed and breakfast inn on Camino Real Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues, has tied up all those loose ends that come with a business sale and has settled down to run the place that she and her husband De Wolfe visited for 20 years.

"I have never run an inn before, but I like it," Mrs. Emory said. "It's busy and deals with people. I had been in 'people businesses' and sales for the past 15 years, and it was the transactions with people that I enjoyed the most.

"There is a nice clientele here in Carmel. I have not had one thing stolen or had one check bounce.

"While we serve coffee and rolls for breakfast now, I hope to start cooking breakfast soon and serve a full continental breakfast of fresh fruit and coffee cake," Mrs. Emory said.

It has been a lot of work, she said, but everyone has been very helpful.

"Everybody has to help each other in this town," she said. "I always knew domestics worked hard, but now I have complete respect for them. They really do work hard," Mrs. Emory said.

Though she has only been here a short time, Mrs. Emory has noticed a difference in the seasonal guests.

SERRA BICENTENNIAL

BY MSGR. FRANCES WEBER

On to Monterey

NOW THAT San Diego had been reinforced by the arrival of the San Antonio, soldiers and missionaries began planning for further expansion. The initial step would be a sea and land trek to Monterey. Junipero Serra opted for the former.

After a long and somewhat uncomfortable voyage, Serra and the crew members of the San Antonio arrived at Monterey on June 1769, there to rendezvous with the overland party which had completed their journey several days earlier.

It was readily agreed that the formal establishment of San Carlos Borromeo Mission would take place on Pentecost Sunday, June 3. Early that day, Gaspar de Portola and the others gathered under a mighty oak by a ravine running into the bay.

It was thought that this tree was the same one under which the Carmelites with Sebastian Vizcaino in 1602 said the first Mass in the area. Again it was chosen as the site for the Eucharistic Liturgy.

Serra related that, after Mass, Portola observed a nicety of protocol by declaring that the "primary purpose" of the king was to extend the faith, so the cross should precede the flag. For that reason, Serra first erected the cross and founded the mission; then there followed the act of taking possession.

There was also a somber note of mourning in the day's otherwise joyous festivities. One of the sailors had died aboard ship the preceding day. Serra assisted at the funeral services, and the remains were buried at the foot of the mission cross.

Next day, the site for the presidio-mission was chosen: a flat piece of land near the ocean, some distance east of the ravine and the oak. Serra called it "a pleasing stretch of land." Easily identifiable today, it is near the present site of the old presidio church still standing in the city of Monterey.

From the very outset, Fray Junipero Serra realized that while San Carlos Mission began at Monterey, the permanent site would not be there. The first ingredient for a mission was lacking: the presence of a large Indian town, as required by the laws of the Indies. There was timber there, but no good drinking water.

On June 14, the Feast of Corpus Christi was observed. The celebration was a relief from the makeshift life they had all been leading. Serra may have magnified its beauty, but to him it was real. He wrote that "it was carried out indeed with such splendor that it could have been witnessed with pleasure had it taken place in Mexico."

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Mental exercise may be as important as physical exercise in maintaining an older person's health, according to the research of a UCLA expert on the aging process. Psychiatrist Dr. Lissy Jarvik conducted a 40-year study on the aging of 134 sets of twins and found that those who kept active mentally did best in retaining their cognitive ability into the later years.

"Good mental exercise could be reading the newspaper, listening to the news, reading books or magazines, playing cards or playing shuffleboard," said Dr. Jarvik "—anything that keeps a person from getting into a total rut."

Local talents teamed in new adventure novel

By ANNE PAPINEAU

A JOURNEY shared by owl, rogue dog and man is chronicled in the latest book by Carmel author Richard Tevis.

Elfinhound, a title Tevis devised during his morning stroll of Carmel Point, is illustrated by Shirley Holt of Pacific Grove. A book-launching party is planned from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Monday, Nov. 26, at the Thunderbird Bookshop in The Barnyard, Carmel.

Elfinhound is a sensory, often philosophical story that travels from the ash-coated Mount St. Helen's region to the sun-scorched Southwest. Following Tevis' self-described "prose-verse" style, readers encounter wind that speaks in tongues, boot-grabbing quicksand, a rock "alive with snakes, rattles glistening."

"I walk Carmel Point every morning and do some of my best thinking there," Tevis observed while drawing on an unlit pipe. "I'd had this idea of a hunter's chase through the Western states. The basic story has been in the back of my mind for five or six years. When the actual writing began it was very easy and a great deal of fun."

Alive as the book is with animals, Tevis asked Shirley Holt if she would illustrate Elfinhound.

"It's a miracle," Tevis said. "I'd finished the book and I'd heard of Shirley Holt but not met her. At the Bear Flag Gallery in San Juan Bautista she was signing copies of Sophie's Surprise, and I introduced myself."

An artist since childhood, Mrs. Holt is noted for her detail-rich, pen and ink images of creatures both real and mythological. Sophie's Surprise, written by Lee Richardson, tells of a stray cat taken in by a toy shop owner to be his mouser. It has sold several thousand copies since it was published last year — rare for an independently published text. The appeal of Sophie's Surprise has been noted overseas, where it is a featured gift book at Harrod's in London.

"I read Elfinhound and just loved it," Mrs. Holt said. "Over one weekend I did the cover — that is the spirit of the book. It just happened. You know when something is right."

Although she also works in oils, the artist used pen and ink to picture the owl and dog of Elfinhound.

"I used the finest Rapidograph point they have," she explained. Images of the rogue dog, "big as a pony," took hours to complete, due to its lush fur and detailed backgrounds.

In Elfinhound, Tevis wrote of this wild dog:

"Cautiously then, he stepped towards the water, lowering his head to drink.

"The gold-gray coat was streaked with sweat. The rib cage showed in the food craved body."

"He pictures things so well," Mrs. Holt said of the book. "To me it's spiritual and ethereal."

NEVER IS the Elfinhound protaganist, "the boy," pictured save in the text.

"He is reflected in the owl's eye, though," the artist said, pointing out the subtle outline of a man in the bird's wide iris.

"For years I've done all types of fantasy," she said. "For the last few years people have associated teddy bears and Shirley Holt. I thought it was time to grow."

Just as the Elfinhound artist has drawn all her life, so has its author written.

"I've written some of the greatest fiction ever known," Tevis noted with a grin — "annual reports. I've written for business and for fun."

Tevis' grandfather, Lloyd Pacheco Tevis, was a onetime poet laureate of the Monterey Peninsula. Richard Tevis attended school at Sunset in Carmel, and his family was friendly with Carmel poet Robinson Jeffers.

"Gaunt and dour" is how Tevis recalled the Carmel poet. As a youth, Tevis spent a few months of the year with the Jeffers family at Tor House.

"I've been a Jeffers reader all my life. I'm sure he's influenced my writing, although we're quite different," Tevis stated. "He was very nice — loved animals, his family, but he was not a man of great outgoing social graces. He was very introspective."

Tevis is also the author of Miracle at San Juan, a work set in San Juan Bautista and illustrated by Eldon Dedini, in addition to two novels.

Of Elfinhound, he commented: "I'm trying to write something that will live."

He said he hopes to publish another book next year, a "poetic history of the Maya. I've done my major research on Mayan civilization. It's going to be unlike any history book. The title will be Chac, for the god of rain."

Also to be completed is Flags of War, "a prose-verse narrative, deadly serious book. It's an examination of the nuclear problem and a searching for the solution. It may be

Empire Brass interpret jazz, the classics

PERFORMING a repertoire that embraces both Mozart and Gershwin, the Empire Brass Quintet will appear at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 27, at Sunset Theater, Carmel. This performance by the winner of the Naumburg Chamber Music Award is sponsored by the Carmel Music Society.

The program will include Suite for Brass by Henry Purcell, Suite from The Water Music by George Frederic Handel, Habanera by Maurice Ravel, Return of the Empire by Ira Taxin and Suite from Porgy and Bess by George Gershwin.

An ensemble of international reputation and acclaim, the Empire Brass performs in concert and with major symphony orchestras on three continents.

The Empire Brass made a rousing debut with the Boston Pops under John Williams at Boston's Symphony Hall in June. The quintet subsequently performed with the Boston Pops at Tanglewood, for which The Berkshire Eagle raved, "The Empire Brass stole the show with a display of incredible musicianship and brassy calisthenics heretofore unheard of."

In March the Empire Brass performed the world premiere of Ira Taxin's Concerto for Brass Quintet and Orchestra with the Cincinnati Symphony, again to unanimous audience and critical acclaim. The 1983-84 season also was highlighted by a second appearance with Bobby Short and his trio in celebration of Cole Porter and a second tour of Japan. In addition, the quintet gave more than 70 concerts throughout the United — at Alice Tully Hall in Lincoln Center, the States, including four New York appearances Cloisters Museum, the 92nd Street Y and the Century Club.

The 1984-85 season finds the Empire Brass giving more than 80 concerts at home and abroad, including performances in London, Zurich and Reykjavik, Iceland. U.S. appearances include the El Paso Symphony, New Orleans and a return to New York's Metropolitan Museum and the Cloisters. Future tours abroad include a third visit to Japan in September and to South Africa in May 1986.

In 1976, the quintet became the first ensemble ever to receive the Naumburg Chamber Music Award, and in 1980 it won the Harvard Music Association Award. Career highlights include the ensemble's New York debut at Carnegie Recital Hall in 1976, a performance for Queen Elizabeth II during her visit to Boston and participation in the celebratory concert for former President Carter's inauguration. Their five European tours have take them to such cities as Berlin, Paris, Amsterdam, Brussels, Cologne, Oslo, Stuttgart and Frankfurt.

For five consecutive years, the Empire Brass has been the Faculty Quintet-in-Residence at Boston University. Ongoing projects include an annual concert series in Boston, and the Empire Brass Quintet Symposium for brass students at Tanglewood, where the ensemble frequently performs.

Over the years the quintet's performances have been greeted with critical praise such as the following from The New York Times: "It takes real brass to put on a chamber music concert without strings, percussion or woodwinds and expect a wide public to be interested in it. But the Empire Brass Quintet, one of the youngest and best groups of this brazen type, did just that in Alice Tully Hall on Monday night. You have not often heard an ensemble that played with more gusto than this one."

The Boston Globe reviewer wrote: "They simply have no competition when it comes to the beauty and clarity and accuracy and balance and interaction of their playing." In the Pittsburgh Post Gazette the critic commented: "Brass ensembles that play with the refinement and polish of our foremost string quartets are few and far between. Probably the foremost of the American brass ensembles is the Empire Brass."

The members of the quintet have recorded more than 20 albums to date, beginning with the 1976 release for CBS, The American Brass Band Journal Revisited. Other releases have included Baroque Brass, Encores, Ewald: Quintet, Broadway Brass, Renaissance Brass, Renaissance and Baroque

AT THE CHERRY FOUNDATION

BY JANE WILGRESS

An evening of Irish music

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 28, at 8 p.m. in Cherry Hall, the Cherry Foundation will welcome back Tom McCreesh for an evening of Irish and American "fiddle music, poetry and stories." Tom, who first came here as part of a trio — Michael, McCreesh and Campbell — is a marvelous artist on his instrument and a delight to listen to, whether reciting poetry by Yeats or playing Ireland's "Gentle Maiden" with Hibernian tendresse.

Said one reviewer: "Tom McCreesh, whose clear, fluid playing certainly would rank him among the finest of today's fiddlers, is also a thoroughly engaging, charming and sometimes disturbingly amusing personality.

"With a myriad of changing facial expressions, from sardonic smiles to awestruck looks of innocent amazement, he virtually conducts the music with his face."

For anyone who enjoys that combination of rootedness and verve that characterizes true folk art, Nov. 28 is a date not to be missed. Tom has played here before to a capacity house. We urge you to call in early for your reservations — 624-7491.

In November of 1955 the Pine Cone Cymbal carried a headline: "Louise Bogan to Read at Cherry Foundation." The article reads: "Louise Bogan, modern poet and poetry critic for the New Yorker, comes to Carmel for a reading of her own poetry at the Carl Cherry Foundation. Louise Bogan's appearance in Carmel is sponsored by the Cherry Foundation in cooperation with the San Francisco Poetry Center. The foundation extends an invitation to those interested in modern poetry to hear Miss Bogan. Attendance is limited to 50 persons. Telephone 4-7491 for reservations."

So, the same telephone number has been in use all these years.

finished in six months, it may take two years."

SHIRLEY HOLT, very busy in the flush of the success of Sophie's Surprise, said: "Illustration is the most natural thing in the world for me. There's a lot of illustrating I could do if I chose to. I don't unless a book really interests me."

A member of the Carmel Art Association, Mrs. Holt said she hopes to return to a series of oil paintings based upon Alice in Wonderland. "I've the preliminary drawings done, but I keep putting it off."

"She's really shaken up the publishing world," Tevis said.

Mutually admiring, both author and artist said they'd consider a second collaboration, although no plans have been finalized.

"One reason I was first attracted to her — she is absolutely marvelous with animals," Tevis said. "She's magical, mystical with animals.

"Shirley, if you weren't married, I'd marry you," Tevis exclaimed.

MUSIC CORNER

BY JO ANN LA TORRA

I Cantori program shines; symphony gives near-miss

I CANTORI di Carmel, under the able direction of Sal Ferrantelli, provided peninsula music lovers with a concert of sublime music Friday and Saturday evenings at the Carmel Mission.

The combination of music and environment was splendid, to say the least, showing how compatible different cultures can be when they meet artistically.

Ferrantelli chose an all-German program (although the Handel works date from his English period) — heavily Baroque, but not lacking variety.

Heinrich Schuetz is a difficult composer to try to describe. One of the greatest of 17th Century south German composers, he is by turns austere, intense, mystical, moody, triumphant, and always deeply moving.

The opening motet, Dulcissime et benignissime Christe, illustrated especially the intense and mystical sides of Schuetz' genius. The chromatic twist of the first phase is so stunning as to leave one breathless. It was a risky beginning for the concert, and not without problems, but not such as to mar the beauty.

Saul, Saul, was verfolgst du mich? is a more extroverted piece, showing the influence of Schuetz' teacher, Giovanni Gabrieli, in its use of opposing choirs.

The lush sonorities of the Brahms' songs, Op. 93a, approach the symphonic. Using folksy texts as well as romantic German poetry, they show off Brahms' versatility in writing for voices. The singers seemed to enjoy them, and were noticeably more relaxed than in the Schuetz group — with good reason.

Sebastian Bach's popular motet, Lobet den Herrn, was an excellent contast to the Schuetz motets. It is a joyous work which ends with a fugal 'Alleluia' that only J.S. could have written. The choir might be a bit large to be ideal for this complex music, but they managed the melismatic passages as well, and one could follow the intricate part-writing.

The second half of the program belonged to Bach's countryman and contemporary, G.F. Handel and featured one of the Chandos anthems and two Coronation anthems. With a complement of trumpets, oboes and tympani added to the strings, they were properly stirring, although there may have been one too many.

Any criticisms, as such, tend to be in the nature of what I might have preferred, to wit: more bass when the instrumental ensemble was playing, and more keyboard — one could scarcely hear either organ or harpsichord; over-dotting in the introduction to the Chandos anthem, for heightened excitement; less string vibrato, especially in the Schuetz.

The instrumental soloists in the Handel pieces should have been more sensitive to the phrasing, especially when they imitated the singers. They seemed almost indifferent. The chorus needs to be more secure in the opening eight bars of everything. And there must be a better way to get pitches than having them sounded out singly on the organ.

IN CONTRAST to the great music presented by I Cantori, the Monterey County Symphony concerts presented composers who might be termed near-misses — good, but not great. The distance is vast.

William Schuman's New England Triptych, based on tunes of the 18th Century North American composer William Billings have aged well. Schuman's musical language is very traditional, the most interest being generated by the sonorities.

Two of the three pieces open with percussion, and some of the wind combinations are wonderful. The wind sections of the orchestra are to be complimented on their playing of this not-always-easy music, and the oboe/bassoon duet of the second piece was especially fine (David Seeley and Richard Palm).

Andres Cardenes appeared as violin soloist in Lalo's Symphony espagnole, but it proved not to be a suitable vehicle for his talent. Cardenes' gift is lyrical and poetic; this concerto wants more spontaneity, more passion, more abandon. The soloist's refined, sweet sound was almost lost in King Hall.

Dvorak's Eighth Symphony comprised the secon dhalf of the program. A pleasant change from the more popular Fifth, the work is Dvorak at his best — melodic, colorful, occasionally lusty. Again, the winds stood out.

It is my understanding that the orchestra is shopping, as it were, for a conductor. It is impossible to form an intelligent opinion of a conductor on one hearing, and especially without attending a rehearsal. Oleg Kovalenko certainly did everything a conductor is expected to do.

The audience was warm, especially to the Dvorak. The musicians seemed quite enthusiastic, if the foot-stomping was interpreted correctly. It is hard on an orchestra to have a different conductor for every concert and we will just have to hope this will be settled this season.

Ninth annual festival

Enologists will toast California

WINE BUFFS will converge on the Monterey Peninsula this weekend as the California Wine Festival, the oldest and longest-running "class wine event," celebrates its ninth year.

The four-day festival — Sunday, Nov. 25, through Wednesday, Nov. 28 — is replete with insiders' tips; a cornucopia of treats for the sampling; and lectures by people who, inches from a wine glass, know what side of the slope those grapes came from.

Attendance tickets for the California Wine Festival are $295. This fee includes registration materials, lectures, seminars, wine tastings and five-course lunches at various restaurants around the peninsula. To members of the hospitality industry, this fee is tax-deductible.

The spectrum of the state wine industry will be profiled by the 89 wineries represented at the festival this year. The participating wineries range from small, "boutique" family-owned wineries to California's largest.

Every wine region in the state will be represented, from Northern to Southern California, including Monterey and Santa Cruz counties.

Hundreds of specially selected wines will be available for sampling. In addition, each winery will have its winemakers and principals on hand to discuss the wines with those in attendance.

"We offer a unique opportunity in getting comprehensive first-hand knowledge of California's fine wines and its winemakers during four leisurely and enjoyable days," said Festival Director Joan Keisel. "Chances are," she added, "that one couldn't duplicate this kind of experience even by travelling all over the state. You'd never meet that many wine personalities, nor be able to sample some of the wines they bring to Monterey."

Demonstrations of "Cooking with Wine" will headline prominent chef Jacky Robert of Ernie's Restaurant in San Francisco and Greenbriar and Gritti Palace Cooking School Director Julie Dannenbaum.

Headquarters for the Ninth Annual California Wine Festival is the Monterey Conference Center, One Portola Plaza, downtown Monterey. Purchase of a ticket is a contribution to the festival scholarship fund, which benefits a person in the fields of enology, viticulture or the hotel/restaurant industry.

Irish/American fiddler and poet appears Nov. 28

THE CARL Cherry Foundation will present fiddler Tom McCreesh on Wednesday, Nov. 28, in an evening of Irish and American music with interpolations of poetry and stories. The concert will begin at 8 p.m. in Cherry Hall, Guadalupe and Fourth, Carmel. Donation will be $5, $4 for students and seniors.

Tom McCreesh has appeared twice before at Cherry Hall, each time to a capacity crowd. For reservations or more information, call the Cherry Foundation at 624-7491. He is one of America's premier traditional fiddle players, whose long experience in such notable American string bands as Fenning's All-Stars, The Hotmud Family and Michael, McCreesh and Company, has perfected his most natural blend of American and Irish music.

McCreesh, from a musical family, grew up in rural New York; his father was a traditional musician from County Armagh in Northern Ireland and his mother a fine dancer from County Clare in Southern Ireland.

From the earliest days, whether playing a reel or a hoedown, Tom's unique ability to make his fiddle speak with power and eloquence has been a hallmark of his playing.

McCreesh also has been instrumental in the revival of "the spoken work," via recitations of classic poems and stories interwoven with music; while his powerful singing of Irish and American songs, both original and traditional, adds yet another dimension to his tightknit performances. McCreesh has brought his music to people in Europe, Ireland, Scotland, England, and throughout Canada and the United States.

IRISH/American Tom McCreesh will present an evening of fiddling, poetry and stories Wednesday, Nov. 28 at Cherry Hall in Carmel.

Versatile quintet performs

Brass, Digital Hits of 1740, and The Empire Brass Plays "Annie."

The Empire Brass was founded in 1971, when its members were introduced to each other by Leonard Bernstein at Tanglewood. Since then, the quintet has been in the vanguard of performing new music and has commissioned works from Mr. Bernstein and other leading composers including Peter Maxwell Davies, Ira Taxin, Gunther Schuller, Earl Kim and Daniel Pinkham

A founding member of the Empire Brass Quintet, Rolf Smedvig, has served as principal trumpet of the Boston Symphony and as a member of the Boston Pops and Boston Symphony Chambers Players. As music director of the Cambridge Chamber Orchestra, he has recorded two albums in which he is featured as conductor and soloist. A native of Seattle, he made his debut with the Seattle Symphony before traveling east to attend Boston University. Leonard Bernstein heard him perform at Tanglewood and engaged him as soloist for the world premiere of his Mass, commissioned for the opening of the Kennedy Center. Smedvig is currently on the faculties of Boston University and the Berkshire Music Center.

Trumpeter Charles A. Lewis, Jr., is on the faculty of both the New England Conservatory and Boston University. A recipient of the coveted C.D. Jackson prize, he played solo trumpet in the Broadway and CBS productions of Much Ado About Nothing and was principal trumpet in the world premiere of Leonard Bernstein's Mass.

Solo appearances for Lewis have included the Concert Orchestra, National Philharmonic Orchestra and the American premiere of Boris Blacher's Concerto for High Trumpet and String Orchestra. A native of Wilmington, Del., Charles Lewis graduated from the Peabody Conservatory of Music and received a master's degree from the New England Conservatory.

David Ohanian, French horn, was a member of the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras from 1970-1981. Since his high school years he has played with the best orchestras in his native state of Connecticut, including the New Haven and Hartford Symphonies, and won the Aetna Life Scholarship for best high school musician in Connecticut.

A student of James Stagliano at the New England Conservatory, he performed with such diverse musical groups as the American National Opera Company with Sarah Caldwell, the Newport Jazz Festival with Barbra Streisand, and Henry Mancini. In 1981, Ohanian resigned his position with the Boston Symphony to devote his time more fully to the Empire Brass Quintet and solo appearances. A founding member of Empire Brass, he is currently on the faculty of Boston University and director of the Empire Brass Quintet Symposium at the Boston University Tanglewood Institute.

A native of Monterey, trombonist Eric Alexander now lives in New Orleans. Since receiving his master of music degree from Boston University, he has performed with the American Institute of Musical Studies Festival Orchestra in Graz, Austria, the New Orleans Philharmonic, Boston Civic Symphony and the Boston-based contemporary music ensemble, Alea III.

Tickets are available at Bartlett's Music, Carmel; Do Re Mi Music, The Barnyard, Carmel; Abinante Music, Monterey; and The Bookworks, Pacific Grove. Prices are $9, $10 and $11. For information, call the Carmel Music Society, 372-1226.

ART NOTES
BY SAM COLBURN

Carmel the art colony

THE SURFACE of the earth is made up or constructed of five great plates. Some time ago, due to their perpetual conflict, the Pacific Coast emerged as the edge of a rising plate, and so the Monterey Peninsula was born.

It was pretty naked at first, but after a while pine, redwood and cypress clothed this rugged terrain. In the beginning there were no humans, but Indians came here to live.

When Father Serra built the Carmel Mission, there were probably around 300,000 to 400,000 living in the area. They were low-brow types, not much interested in drawing and painting, but sat around eating shellfish.

The Monterey Peninsula demands artists, however, and they began to come here before the turn of the century. This meeting of land and sea (from Monterey south, actually through Big Sur, but centered in Point Lobos) has been described as the greatest in the world. As word of the magic beauty of the area spread, a heavy influx of artists began.

They charged in with brush and palette, with canvas stretched, with watercolor ready to flow. They built houses with studios. Here they painted, etched or sculpted. So they lived, worked and died on the Monterey Peninsula.

Their subject matter was exciting to the eye, but, in fact, limited to land and sea plus fisherman who worked on the pier mending or steaming their nets or going out to purse seiners in their huge rowboats.

Well, what more could you desire really? What is missing is the great brash contact of people in cities, the movement by foot or bus or subway, the range of classes (poor, middle class, rich). Out of such things come new trends and schools of thought about art.

All of the great movements start in cities. In Europe there was Paris. Remember, the Impressionists had their first show there, but it was quite a while before they became popular with the public. Now their works are revered. One of their members did not sell one painting in his lifetime, but what does a Van Gogh sell for nowadays?

This does not mean a lack of fine painters on the Monterey Peninsula, but they and their work are separated from the mainland of art and so we remain an island. Very few of us make it to the Continent. Donald Teague, who has lived in Carmel for years, is one resident artist whose work has a very high and consistent market value any place in this country.

When an artist achieves stature in contemporary art, a large publisher will print a book about him and reproduce his work. This happens to people like Rauschenberg or Lichenstein or Diekenborn. These artists all became famous through their connections in New York.

It is not that we are lacking in artists with original imagery, but simply that we stay here — seduced by the beauty and the life on this stretch of coast. It is possible though that the Golden Age of Art on the peninsula existed during the lifetimes of those early artists who came here and formed the Carmel Art Association.

It was incorporated on Feb. 5, 1934. In 1937 there were two galleries in Carmel — the first single room of the association, and one run by Smithson on the east side of Lincoln just south of Ocean. Many of those who painted here in those pristine days had strong personal imagery. They were not, and Carmel was not, corrupted by the Common Market.

In recent years, the number of artists in the United States has trebled. As few people desire to be closet painters or sculptors, there has been an explosion of galleries — most of them trying to convince their customers that whatever they purchase is unique. Art is not for the elite any more.

The merchandising of art has become a religion of business. Millions of people are to be converted to the idea that they must have paintings, drawings, sculpture, so why not buy art which is an investment that can only increase in value?

No wonder that in Carmel today there are almost as many galleries as there are real estate agents. The big boys in art don't come here anymore. Fernand Leger once held a workshop in Carmel in John Cunningham's Carmel Art Institute.

The famous sculptor Archipenko gave a lecture in the gallery of the Carmel Art Association. Salvador Dali came, at the invitation of Sam Morse, and painted the entire ceiling of the Bali Room of the Hotel Del Monte for the annual Artists' Ball. An old taxicab lay on its side on the dance floor. Guess what embellished the interior? A nude, of course.

Lights go on in Monterey

Christmas decorations have been put up in downtown Monterey, and lights will be turned on Friday, Nov. 23.

New this year are red fabric banners, designed to complement the traditional mission-style angels and financed by the Old Monterey Council.

OMC has contracted with the Monterey Peninsula Jaycees, a volunteer group, to install the large banners featuring angels with trumpets at intersections on Del Monte Avenue near the Conference Center and on Munras Street near Simineau Plaza

All decorations will be up by Thanksgiving Day, and the official Christmas tree at Colton Hall will be lit on Friday, Nov. 7, in a ceremony beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Polovy leads demonstration

The Central Coast Art Association will sponsor an experimental art demonstration by Shirley Polovy at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Nov. 26, in room 10 of Sunset Center, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel. The art demonstration is open to the public. Admission is free.

Study 'Art in Architecture'

Architect Lee Phillips will discuss "The Art in Architecture" at the Wednesday, Nov. 28, Art Sandwich sponsored by the Pacific Grove Art Center.

The Art Sandwich begins at noon every Wednesday in the center, 568 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove. Visitors are encouraged to bring a brown bag lunch. Coffee and tea are provided. A donation of $2.50 for non-members and $1.50 for members is requested. For more information, call 375-2208.

Alexander Dzigurski show opens at Simic

CALLED "the poet of the sea" by the New York Times, Alexander Dzigurski will be honored with a one-man show at the Simic Galleries in Carmel.

The artist will be present at a champagne opening reception from 5 to 9 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 24. The galleries are on San Carlos at Sixth.

A native of Yugoslavia, Dzigurski studied at the School of Art in Belgrade and the Academy of Art in Munich, Germany. In the early part of his career he painted portraits and sacred art. Dzigurski decorated seven churches in Yugoslavia.

Eventually the artist turned to the landscapes and seascapes on which he built his career. He has captured scenes in both Europe and the United States, including the Monterey Peninsula where he operated a gallery for many years.

"When I go to the Carmel coast there are usually so many tourists I just don't have an opportunity to work," Dzigurski said. "But when there is a really bad storm, there's nobody there. And this is the time I really enjoy."

Dzigurski's paintings are on permanent collection in five major museums, including the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, the Ford Museum, the Franklin Mint and Norton Gallery. His awards include the Gold Medal, Biennale de Venezia, Italy; First Popular Award, The Society of Western Artists and Award of Merit, Showcase 21, Los Angeles.

The Chicago Tribune wrote: "He is an amazing combination of many qualities which have made his paintings unforgettable when once seen. Few painters of the American scene have had his meteoric rise to universal popularity."

The book, The Art of Alexander Dzigurski will be available during the show. For additional information, call 624-7522 or 624-2144.

BIG SUR Coastline,* an original by Alexander Dzigurski, is among the artist's seascapes and landscapes to be exhibited at Simic Galleries in Carmel. A champagne reception is slated from 5 to 9 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 24.

Navajo weavings showcased during exhibit

A COLLECTION of more than 200 contemporary rugs by Navajo weavers comes to the Doubletree Inn in Monterey Friday through Sunday, Nov. 23-25. The show highlights award-winning weavings from the 1984 Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial and the New Mexico State Fair.

The show is coordinated by Becky Hammond, who with her husband was stationed at Window Rock, Ariz., as a public health worker from 1977 to 1982. There Mrs. Hammond encountered native American weavers in this, the capitol of the Navajo nation.

Of that experience, she said: "It was obvious to us during that time that the gravest problem facing the Navajos today is the unemployment rate of close to 70 percent. During our stay we came to know several weavers and their families and realized how critical the weaving income was to them. I decided to start a business which would provide consistent income to these families for something they do well."

Mrs. Hammond commented that it is difficult to appreciate the time and skill that go into creating a Navajo rug without seeing one made. For this reason Navajo weaver Jessie Bitsui from Chinle, Ariz., will demonstrate weaving throughout the weekend.

"Jessie never makes a sketch of the intricate pattern she is going to create. She just sees it in her head as she works," Mrs. Hammond said. "I am always amazed as this one-of-a-kind tapestry unfolds before my eyes when I watch her work."

Mrs. Hammond will share insights of research she is doing for a book about Navajo weavers in a free lecture and slide presentation at 11 a.m., 2 and 4 p.m. daily. The lives of noted weavers will be introduced in a 30-minute program to help viewers understand how this 300-year-old tradition is kept alive by a group of Navajo grandmothers and their daughters and granddaughters working as a team.

"Once you have met a Navajo weaver like Jessie Bitsui and watched her weave and also seen this collection of the very best rugs being made lately, you will look at all Navajo rugs with a new appreciation," Mrs. Hammond said. "I have tried to put together a collection that introduces people not only to the famous regional patterns, but also to the newest weaving innovations."

Admission is free to the show, and all rugs are for sale. Show hours are 2 p.m. to 9 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

NAVAJO weaver Jessie Bitsui from Chinle, Ariz., will provide weaving demonstrations throughout the weekend at the Doubletree Inn, Monterey.
